Grenoble Engineering Program

The Grenoble Engineering Program is a one-semester program, ideally suited for second-semester sophomores in engineering. The program carries no prior language requirement; engineering courses are taught in English by French faculty members. Upon successful completion of the program, students earn a total of 20 Boston University credits.

The rewards are many:

- Exposure to another culture in preparation for technical careers in the global economy.
- Study of engineering and science in an advanced international environment.
- Observation of French research institutions, industries, and technical museums through guided field trips

HOST INSTITUTION

The Université de Grenoble dates from the fourteenth century and has a distinguished tradition of excellence in science, technology, arts and letters. Its beautiful setting in the French Alps provides an excellent university atmosphere for students in the program.

HOUSING

All students are provided with accommodations in French households throughout the city, to facilitate language learning and to integrate them into daily life. Students are given a single room, breakfast, and a specified number of evening meals per month in the home. They receive an allowance for local transportation and for meals not taken with their hosts.
