

CAS IR 418 Politics, Nations and Identity in the New Europe: Switzerland and the European Union

Instructor: Dr. Susanne Peters

Speters9@bluewin.ch

2 x 20 hours

What is Europe, and are the Swiss in or out of it? This new course is designed as an introduction to some of the most pressing cultural and political issues in present-day Europe. Focusing on the host country, Switzerland, it will set this small independent nation in the context of European history through a structured comparison with its most powerful neighbors, France and Germany. The history and rationale of the European Union, the current crisis in the Eurozone, the challenges of the EU enlargement and the thorny issue of migration will all be discussed. In a first section we will address historical and background knowledge on key elements of European history and the European integration process as well as the international criticism Switzerland faced in the mid 90s as a result of its policies during and after World War II. In a second section we will compare Switzerland's society, political culture and political system with France and Germany. Highly controversial and relevant topics for Switzerland and Europe, e.g. where to draw the line of what country is in or out of Europe, immigration policy including relations with Central European states regarding migration of Roma and Sinti will be discussed as well.

The course has four main objectives:

- 1) understand to what extent history has shaped the political systems and political culture of Switzerland, France and Germany
- 2) give detailed insight into Switzerland and understand what distinguishes it from Germany and France in regard to its governmental system, political culture and political development
- 3) understand key controversial issues in European contemporary politics
- 4) explore to what extent Switzerland is influenced by the dynamics, challenges and future of the European Union

There are no pre-requisites for this class, which should be of interest to students in IR, Political Science, History, or European studies - as well as anyone who just wants to make sense of present-day Switzerland.

Texts:

A course pack will be made available.

Requirements and grading:

Assignments for the course, and the objectives of each of them will be explained in greater detail on the first day of class.

Participation	10 %
Presentation of term paper	10 %
Term paper	40 %
Final Exam	40 %

For the term paper a 10% penalty will be applied to any work submitted within 4 hours after the deadline, a 20% penalty after 4 hours delay.

Attendance and participation are a key component of your grade. Class Participation includes regular attendance, to be verified by signature lists. Unexcused absences as well as regular lateness will affect your grade. Evaluations of your participation will further depend on your active participation in class discussions. This includes recurring in-class discussions. These discussions will center on selected texts from the reader. As these discussions are integral parts of your grade, it would be highly advantageous for you to read and scrutinize the texts before class.

There will be one examination to be held in class. The exam questions will consist of:

- A multiple choice section on terms on terms discussed in class
- A short-answer section consisting of 500-word explanations and discussions of terms or phenomena covered in class, in their historical, political and/or theoretical context, and
- An essay question inviting students to think critically about the given subject in a response of 1000 words.

Term Paper: Students will be required to write an empirical research paper for this class. The length of the paper should be about 3,500 words, and should include a bibliography. The bibliography should list at least eight different academic sources. The deadline for handing in the essay is the last day of class.

Form of delivery of written assignments: All documents have to be sent electronically, either in .doc (Word), .rtf or .pdf formats.

Plagiarism

All students are responsible for having read the Boston University statement on plagiarism, which is available in the Academic Conduct Code. Students are advised that the penalty against students on a Boston University program for cheating on examinations or for “plagiarism” may be “expulsion from the program or the University or such other penalty as may be recommended by the Committee on Student Academic Conduct, subject to approval by the dean.”
