Course Objectives

This course aims to give students a detailed knowledge of texts selected from a variety of representative and influential modern authors. As well as providing the student with some degree of requisite contextual information regarding biographical, social and political backgrounds, there will be a predominant emphasis throughout the course on the development of some of the skills and vocabulary that are needed to foster competent and persuasive literary interpretation.

The issues raised throughout the course will be as various as the works themselves and typically might range from discussions of a specific poetic technique to issues as broad and as provocative as the self and society, class and language, God and nihilism and the nature and function of art.

Assessment

1. One essay, at least 2000 words (about 8 typed pages, double-spaced in 12-point font). The essay is to be devoted to one or more of the texts we have studied and is to be submitted before the final examination. Titles to be discussed with the tutor. This essay accounts for 45% of your final grade.
2. Final exam consisting of one essay and one exercise in practical criticism. No notes or copies of texts will be allowed in the examination room. The exam accounts for 45% of your final grade.
3. Participation in class sessions accounts for 10% of your final grade.
4. Class attendance is compulsory. Monday and Tuesday sessions run from 1.15 p.m. to 5.15 p.m. in the Harrington room.

T.S.Eliot

For the poetry use either The Selected Poems or Complete Poems and Plays edition, both Faber. There is a biography by Peter Ackroyd (1984) but you will probably find the first section of Lyndall Gordon's life more relevant – Eliot's Early Years (1977.) For Eliot's prose you might want to look at either his Selected Essays or the Selected Prose ed.J.Hayward, or the selection edited by Frank Kermode. There is also an interview with Eliot in The Paris Review no.21 (1959.)

E.M.Forster

The Penguin edition of A Room With a View is a good edition to use, edited by Malcolm Bradbury (2000.) The standard biography is still that by P.N.Furbank E.M.Forster, A Life 2 vols., (1977-8.)

R.Macaulay The writings of E.M.Forster (1938,1970)

L.Trilling E.M.Forster (1940)

J.Beer The Achievement of E.M.Forster (1962)

Tony Harrison

There is a good, annotated selection of Harrison's poetry in Permanently Bard (1995) edited by C.Rutter

N.Astley ed., Tony Harrison : Blood Axe Critical Anthology (1991)

J.Kelleher Tony Harrison (1996)

For some pertinent comments on 'V' and obscenity see the chapter 'Lars Porsena Revisited' in State of the Language (1990 edition) eds., C.Ricks and L.Michaels

Seamus Heaney

The most generous selection of Heaney's poetry is his Opened Ground : Poems 1966-1996 (1998.) There is a good interview with Heaney in The Paris Review No.144,1997.

Ted Hughes

For a cross section of Hughes' work try the Faber Collected Poems (2003.) There is a biography by Elaine Feinstein Ted Hughes : The Life of a Poet (2002) and the letters are available in a Faber volume (edited by Christopher Reid,2007)

For two usefully provocative, critical accounts of Hughes see the essays by G.I.James,'The Animal Poems of Ted Hughes : A Devaluation' in Southern Review vol.II,no.3,1967,193-203,and A.D.Moody's 'Telling it Like It's Not : Ted Hughes and Craig Raine' in The Yearbook of English Studies vol.17,1987,166-178.

Philip Larkin

For the poetry see Collected Poems edited by A.Thwaite (1988) who also edited the Selected Letters of Philip Larkin 1940-1985 (1993.)
