

The Office of Diversity and Multicultural Affairs

Invites you to a concert featuring

Women of the World

Women of the World is an eclectic group of extraordinary female vocalists from different parts of the world including Japan, India, Italy, and the United States. The singers create rich tapestries of culture and sound as they harmoniously weave their voices, instruments and musical traditions. They will be joined on stage by an international ensemble of musicians from the Berklee College of Music.

Women of the World have performed at prestigious venues such as Carnegie Hall, have shared the stage with Angelique Kidjo, and have received accolades from Bobby McFerrin.

The concert, which will be dedicated to Dr. Jonathan Woodson, will draw a powerful analogy between diversity in music and diversity in medicine as a strategy to achieve excellence. Dr. Thea James will be recognized for her exemplary dedication as a physician. The evening will celebrate women and multiculturalism.

Date: Friday, December 9, 2011

Time & Place: 6:00 – 7:00 PM Reception: Medical School Lobby (Food and drinks will be served)

7:00 – 7:15 PM Opening act: BUSM Band - Bakst Auditorium

7:00 – 8:30 PM Concert: Women of the World - Bakst Auditorium

Admission: Free – All are welcome.

