Course Objective

- To provide students with knowledge pertaining to the scientific, political, legal and ethical issues that drives the advancement and innovation in medical biotechnology.
- To provide students with basic concepts and understanding of how the various drivers of medical biotechnology interact with one another and shape the business and finance of this industry and impact the growth of medical biotechnology companies.
- To provide students with knowledge of how scientific development, legal and ethical issues shape the public view of the medical biotechnology and its applications.

The course is structured as follows:
- Presentations of key issues in medical biotechnology through case studies
- Case-based discussion of emerging medical biotechnologies
- Discussion of contemporary articles in the field of medical biotechnology

Course Structure