

Bravo, Andy!

Reality TV phenom Andy Cohen (COM'90) draws hundreds to kick off BU's latest group for alumni

By Kelly Cunningham

THIS PAST SUMMER, Bravo TV executive and host Andy Cohen invited New York alumni to the Manhattan bar Capitale to mix and mingle, enjoy libations, hear his tales of real housewives and television success, and launch the BUAA's Alumni Network for Media, Communication & Entertainment.

"Andy was personable and funny," says Robin Liftman (SMG'83). "He openly shared with the audience how his career has evolved through his hard work, openness to new ideas, and proactive attitude."

More than 350 alumni and guests packed the house, many eager to kick off BU's newest affinity network by swapping business cards and trade secrets. "It was exciting to be surrounded by BU grads in New York," says Bruna Maia (CAS'10). "And Andy was charismatic and warm. He made sure we felt engaged by his story and comfortable asking him for career advice."

Learn more about all of the regional and affinity networks offered by the BUAA at bu.edu/alumni/networks.

Andy Cohen (COM'90), Bravo TV's executive vice president of original programming and development, helped launch BU's newest affinity network in New York City.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY CRAIG WILLISTON