Projects, Tips, and Adventures for Moms and Their 21st-Century Families (Potter Craft, 2012). “After I left BU, I worked for weekly and daily newspapers, spent time managing a Barnes & Noble bookstore, and finally left the workplace to raise my four children,” she writes. “But I still had the need to write, and published some articles for various webzines and eventually became involved in several internet forums, including moderating a site for comic creator Gail Simone. Along the way, I was asked to come aboard Wired.com’s GeekDad blog as a contributor. The four women who wrote for GeekDad then spun off onto our own GeekMom site, which was also picked up by Wired.com.” Visit www.corrina-lawson.com.

THOMAS LEHRICH (SMG’87) of Washington, D.C., is counsel to the managing director for the Federal Maritime Commission, where he will help the nation with ocean-borne shipping initiatives. Previously, he served in leadership roles in the US Department of Transportation and the Transportation Security Administration. Thomas and his wife, Debbie, have three children. Email him at tlehrich@fmc.gov.

1990

DAVID DELL (ENG’90) of Wichita, Kans., works for Bombardier, a global aircraft and train manufacturer. He writes that the mid-sized aircraft, Bombardier Learjet 85,