

Boston University Marine Program Lecturer Position – Tropical Marine Fisheries

The Marine Program at Boston University invites applications for a part-time Lecturer beginning October 1, 2019 to teach a Tropical Marine Fisheries course. We seek a colleague with a strong commitment to undergraduate education and a track record of excellence in teaching. Responsibilities include revising the existing course to reflect current fisheries issues, correspondence with other Marine Semester instructors to help in planning travel logistics, and teaching a research-based course in Boston and Belize.

Course dates are October 28th – November 20th and include 12 days of travel to the Calabash Caye Field Station in Belize. The Marine Semester is an intensive research-based semester offered to Marine Science majors, minors, and graduate students. This course will have 10-15 students and will be taught in close conjunction with another course - Coral Reef Restoration, which travels to Belize at the same time.

The successful candidate will have a thorough understanding of fisheries practices, experience leading groups in the field, and have prior teaching experience. Must hold a Ph.D. in a related field. A competitive salary (1-month) is offered.

Please submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, and statement of teaching philosophy to Wally Fulweiler (rwf@bu.edu) and Julia Hammer Mendez (hammer@bu.edu). Please arrange for three letters of reference to be submitted to the same addresses. All applications must include “Marine Semester Lecturer” in the subject line. Review of applications will begin March 26, 2019 and will continue until the position is filled. Inquiries about the position or application process can be addressed to the BU Marine Program Director, Wally Fulweiler at rwf@bu.edu.
