Zanzibar: Religion, Politics, and Identity in East Africa

As the crossroads of African, Persian, Arab, Indian, and European cultures for nearly two millennia, the islands of Zanzibar provide a unique setting in which to explore issues of religion, ethnicity, race, gender, class, and politics in East Africa. This six-week program explores the history of Zanzibar as a center of international trade, slavery, and colonial expansion, the legacies of social division and political centralization left by colonial rule, and the ways in which Zanzibar’s experience differs from and interacts with the histories of Tanzania, Mozambique, Kenya, and other neighboring states. Zanzibar is also an ideal setting for intensive study of Swahili, the most widely spoken African language.

Students take one course on the political and cultural history of Zanzibar and East Africa as well as one Swahili language course. Excursions complement the curriculum and may include Dar es Salaam, Pemba Island, one of Tanzania’s national parks, and cultural and conservation sights on the island of Zanzibar and in mainland Tanzania, such as spice plantations and unique coastlines. All courses are taught by either BU faculty or faculty from the Institute of Kiswahili and Foreign Languages at the State University of Zanzibar (SUZA). Upon successful completion of the program, students earn eight Boston University credits.

HOST INSTITUTION
Located in the UNESCO-designated World Heritage Center of Stone Town, SUZA is the premier public institution of higher learning in Zanzibar. As part of SUZA, the Institute of Kiswahili and Foreign Languages has a long tradition of teaching Swahili as a foreign language. The program includes a Student Language Partner Program in which foreign students are matched with Swahili-speaking students for conversation exchanges.

FACULTY
Timothy Longman is an Associate Professor of Political Science at Boston University, as well as the Director of the African Studies Center. He has also taught in the International Human Rights Exchange at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, South Africa, and at the National University of Rwanda.

Judith Mmari is an experienced Kiswahili instructor, having taught the language in both academic year and summer intensive formats for the last 12 years. She has worked on the development of distance learning/multimedia materials in Kiswahili at Ohio, Harvard, and Boston Universities.

HOUSING
Boston University arranges accommodations with local host families for students to facilitate their language acquisition and to integrate them into everyday life in Zanzibar. All students are provided with accommodations in households throughout the capital district of Stone Town.

ADMISSIONS
- No previous Swahili language study required
- Refer to our policy on eligibility/admissions at: www.bu.edu/abroad/admissions

PROGRAM DATES
Summer Term: May 27–July 5, 2013

APPLICATION DEADLINE
Summer Term: March 1

2012/2013 PROGRAM COST
Costs for Summer 2013 have not yet been announced and will be subject to approval by the Board of Trustees of Boston University. Financial aid is available.