Wednesday Plenary Speakers Highlight Antiretroviral Access

Wednesday’s plenary speakers will highlight several key issues in the push for universal access to antiretroviral therapy.

Anti-HIV Drugs for Prevention

Dr. Bernard Hirschel (Switzerland) of the Infectious Diseases Service Geneva University Hospitals said that treatment as prevention is a promising strategy that needs to be properly evaluated in clinical trials. It is known that decreased viral load lowers the risk of HIV transmission and that effective treatment lowers viral load to undetectable levels. Funding agencies are currently evaluating proposals that provide more definitive data than current studies. In such studies, a number of communities would be randomized to receive the “test-and-treat” approach or to continue as before. These trials face logistical, practical and ethical obstacles. However, without more definitive data, the intuitive appeal of “test-and-treat” is unlikely to translate into action on a global scale. In the meantime, based on the available evidence, the medical community must strive to provide treatment under current guidelines to those patients in need, leading to better individual and societal outcomes, including decreasing HIV incidence.

A Proposal for Change: Managing Patents for Access to AIDS Medicines for All

Ellen ‘t Hoen (The Netherlands) of UNITAID will discuss intellectual property and the Medicines Patent Pool, a new mechanism that allows patent holders to voluntarily offer the intellectual property related to their AIDS medicines, under certain conditions. Any company wishing to use the intellectual property to produce the drugs can do so in exchange for a royalty payment. According to ‘t Hoen, if licenses for patents on AIDS drugs are not made available in countries that grant patents, generic competition will no longer be able to play a role in bringing down prices. By making licenses available and harnessing the power of competition in medicines markets, the Medicines Patent Pool could promote the availability of better and more robust treatments and generate considerable cost savings.

ART Advances – Into the Next Decade

Dr. James Hakim (Zimbabwe) of the University of Zimbabwe will call on the HIV/AIDS community to accelerate access to antiretroviral therapy that maintains the long-term health of PLHIV; develop point-of-care diagnostics that allow clinicians to prescribe medications wisely; and improve health delivery systems that can efficiently provide therapy to those still in need. Despite the rapid scale-up of ART, the world is not moving fast enough to keep up with the pace of five new HIV infections for every two PLHIV who gain access to ART. As countries move to adopt new WHO treatment recommendations, equity and human rights must remain paramount to implementing a progressive and comprehensive HIV response in. According to Hakim, the Millennium Development Goals serve as a clear roadmap to the overall achievement of the sanctity of human dignity.

Visit the Global Village

Activities in the Global Village are in full swing, with delegates and the public interacting in the various networking zones that focus on priority populations, issues and geographic regions. Visit the CONDOMIZE Zone, where you can touch, taste and feel different condoms and lubricants. In the Human Rights Networking Zone, you can watch video screenings or participate in a panel discussion or skills-building workshop on HIV- and human rights–related topics. For more information on the wide variety of Global Village activities, refer to the Programme Activities guide.
Pre-Conference on Children Urges Comprehensive Family Care

The pre-conference on children, hosted by the Coalition on Children Affected by AIDS and the Teresa Group, provided an opportunity for participants to discuss issues focused on improving support and care for families and younger children affected by HIV/AIDS. Symposium attendees called for family-centred prevention, treatment and care for children, with a strong emphasis on eliminating pediatric AIDS and reducing maternal mortality while expanding and connecting services related to the care and support of children. Speaking at the meeting, titled “Children and HIV: Family Support First,” Elizabeth Mataka, UN Special Envoy for HIV and AIDS in Africa, said, “HIV/AIDS services need to be integrated with maternal and child health, as well as with TB, nutrition and family planning programmes, in order to serve the health and well-being of women, their children and families.” The pre-conference attracted 440 attendees from 67 countries.

Conference Hubs Expand Reach of AIDS 2010

From New York to Sydney and Taipei to Maputo, at least 45 organizations worldwide are bringing AIDS 2010 to their communities. Targeting scientists, community activists and others involved in the HIV/AIDS response, these organizations are using conference hubs to strengthen their HIV response locally, build professional capacities among local stakeholders and engage regional leaders. Hubs are featuring screenings of selected sessions, workshops and trainings, and moderated discussions on how information presented at the conference can be used locally. Through discussion and debate, the hubs are helping to strengthen the local response to HIV/AIDS with the possibility of developing comprehensive plans for future actions at the local or regional levels.

The conference secretariat invites delegates to organize similar activities upon returning home, using webcasts of many conference sessions that will continue to be available following the meeting. For more information, contact the hubs team at hubs@aids2010.org.

Rapporteur Reports

During the conference, an international team of rapporteurs will prepare summaries of all sessions. Community leaders also will share their perspectives. Session reports and daily summaries in each track will be available in the Programme-at-a-Glance on the conference website. Rapporteur teams also will be dedicated to covering activities in the Global Village and Youth Pavilion. Those summaries will be available online and at the Rapporteur Session on Friday, 23 July.
