Executive Summary

In this proposal, the Center for Gender, Sexuality and Activism proposes that an office for Assault Response and Prevention Services be developed and implemented on campus. Over the course of seven weeks, two Boston University hockey players were arrested and charged with sexual assault.¹ Following these two arrests, media attention has been directed at the allegations of sexual assault, rather than giving attention to our award-winning academic programs, student life, or faculty; rather, publicity has been directed at the allegations of sexual assault, and Boston University has been lambasted for cultivating a culture that perpetuates interpersonal violence. The number of sexual assaults reported on campus every year is dwarfed by the figures projected by research and surveys. For example, in 2007, the Boston University Police Department released statistics indicating that a combined number of ten "Forcible" and "Non-Forcible" sexual assaults had been reported. In 2008, the figure was nine. In 2009, the figure had dropped to two. A U.S. Department of Justice study found that one in five women are sexually assaulted during their college careers. The incidents reported to the Boston University Police Department do not correspond with the frequency of sexual assaults reported by the Department of Justice. Within the Boston University community, there is widespread concern about the lack of resources available to Boston University students, faculty, and staff, both in terms of preventing assault on campus and creating support systems in place to deal with assaults if they take place. We propose that an office, namely the Assault Response and Prevention Services (ARPS), be developed and implemented on campus.

Methods

How did we begin?

- A working group was created through members of the Center for Gender, Sexuality and Activism.
- A petition was created via change.org.
 - This petition was spread internationally and garnered an incredible outpouring of support.
 - The petition currently has over a thousand signatures of support.
- A representative from the group proposed a basic outline of an office for assault response and prevention services to the Boston University Student Union.
 - The Student Union passed a resolution in support of the development of the ARPS.

Where did we start?

- A focus group researched schools that have interpersonal violence response centers in place, namely by assessing their methodology, resources, and effectiveness.
- This focus group directed their attention towards Boston University's peer institutions to assess what comparable universities are doing to provide interpersonal violence resources for their students.
- Correspondences were developed between members of the focus group and directors of programs at peer institutions such as Syracuse, Northwestern, George Washington, and Columbia. Subsequent communications provided details on initializing and maintaining effective programs.

Who informed our research?

- Members of the working group met with various faculty and staff of the Boston University, such as:
 - Dr. David McBride and Maureen Mahoney, LICSW of Student Health Services who made us aware of the currently available services on campus.
 - Professor Carrie Preston, joint faculty in the English and Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies departments
- We received multiple letters of support from prominent figures in the Boston community support of the development of the ARPS office, in addition to many members of Boston University faculty and staff.
- The Center for Gender, Sexuality, and Activism met with President Brown to discuss plans for a Take Back the Night event on campus, corresponding an important dialogue about the culture at Boston University.

After research, meetings, and much appreciated advice, the working group wrote a comprehensive proposal for the Assault Response and Prevention Services that details the duties the center will carry out on campus as well as the resources needed to serve the Boston University community.

Comparison with Boston University's Peer Institutions

As precedent by President Brown's strategic plan, we can critique Boston University's features by comparing the university against specific peer institutions.² Specific comparisons against peer institutions are available in the appendix, and key examples of successful programs at peer institutions have been detailed below. Of Boston University's 13 peer institutions, 9 have university-sanctioned interpersonal violence centers, and of those 9 programs, 5 have physical spaces dedicated to counseling and preventative programming. The other four institutions have crisis centers set up through the campus Judicial Affairs and Behavior Health, in the same fashion as Boston University.

Syracuse University

Syracuse University's Advocacy Center is perhaps the most established sexual assault center of Boston University's peer institutions. Its rich history of twenty-two years offers us a wealth of information on effective modes of creating and sustaining a center that secures and enriches its campus community.

Founded in 1990, Syracuse University's Advocacy Center was established as a result of a task force on rape, which was created to address student and faculty concerns about the prevalence of rape involving Syracuse University students.

Funded by the Division of Student Affairs, the Advocacy Center features two full-time staff, one half-time graduate assistant, a shared administrative assistant, 8 staff volunteers, and 70-80 student volunteers.

According to its director, Janet Epstein, each academic year, the Advocacy Center directly counsels between 35 and 50 students for sexual violence, relationship violence, stalking, and sexual harassment. It also sees many friends, family members, partners, staff, and faculty who seek assistance for themselves or on behalf of others. In the 2010-2011 academic year, it reported having reached 8,500 students and family members through educational and outreach programs, which included peer education programming and the Center's support of an educational theater troupe, a men's group, and collaborative efforts with campus Greek life. Students can become peer educators that advocate for a safer community through interactive workshops and work in counseling services. Past volunteers report their involvement as eye-opening and validating in their roles against violence, putting "prevention in a positive and achievable" light.

Harvard University

Across the river, The Office of Sexual Assault Prevention & Response (OSAPR) has been serving Harvard University students since 2003. Their model stresses empowerment, community collaboration, diversity of staff and services, and the promotion of data collection and research efforts on best practices in service and policy. The Office includes three full-time staff: a director, a prevention specialist, and an education specialist. Together, they provide 24-hour support and information services and provide educational, training, and outreach initiatives throughout the year. The Office also offers extensive information on external resources to respect the decisions and needs of those seeking their services.

In April 2010, Harvard announced that OSAPR will serve the entire University rather than just the College, a change of demand from about 6,500 students to 20,000 students, which was associated with a change to partial funding by student health service fees.³ In its first year, it held 15 training sessions for College officers and clinicians as well as educational events for leadership groups, individual students, and rising first-year students through a mandatory event during “Freshman Week” and subsequent dialogues.⁴

Northwestern University

The Center for Awareness, Response, & Education (CARE) has served the students of Northwestern University since September 2011. It came about through a needs assessment by Northwestern’s Campus Coalition on Sexual Violence (CCSV), an organization of over 60 members from student groups, campus departments, and university agencies that meet monthly to assess recommended improvements to university policy. In 2011, the CCSV received a $300,000 federal grant from the US Department of Justice Office on Violence Against Women to improve sexual violence prevention and response services on campus. Other funds derive from the Office of Health Promotion and Wellness, a division of Northwestern’s Office of Student Affairs. Two full-time staff (a director for response and a director for education and prevention) are available five days a week in CARE's physical space in the Health Services building.⁵

ARPS Benefits to the University

Properly addressing the fact that sexual violence occurs in the Boston University community promotes a campus environment that counteracts the perpetuation of silence surrounding interpersonal violence. There is an immediate need for an effective means of acknowledging the problem of sexual violence on campus, of providing resources for those who have experienced sexual violence, and of introducing prevention and education programming to stop sexual violence from occurring in the first place. The community would benefit greatly from extensive action on the administrative level.

Several advantages of having an office of assault response and prevention services (ARPS) include:

- Ensuring adequate resources for students in all stages of their experience with interpersonal violence and ensuring a supportive safe space for affected members of the Boston University community.
- Diminishing tensions for students who feel neglected by current University policies regarding sexual assault or for those students who feel as though their personal needs are not currently being met.
- Increasing campus safety and security for all members of the Boston University community.

- Promoting an informed, communal student body.
- Standing alongside peer institutions that already offer a myriad of resources and services surrounding the issue of sexual assault. In creating ARPS, Boston University would emerge as a progressive institution that is dedicated to providing necessary resources to its students.
- Demonstrating that Boston University values the safety of its students and that the University is willing to offer a cooperative, comprehensive, and well-researched solution to interpersonal violence on campus.
- Acknowledging that sexual assault exists on all college campuses, a fact that many colleges and universities do not acknowledge. This acknowledgement would improve Boston University's image by showing parents, students, trustees, faculty, and staff that BU's primary concern is for students' personal safety and well being in all areas.
- Providing resources for the gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered, queer, questioning, and intersex (GLBTQQI) community at Boston University who struggle with sexual assault. The ARPS office aims to publicize that everyone is affected by sexual assault, no matter their gender identification or sexual orientation.
- Lessening the load currently resting on the shoulders of the BUPD by educating the student body, staff, and faculty on consent and measures that the community can take to stop sexual violence and by developing a working relationship that would facilitate proceedings in assault cases in a manner safe and secure for those seeking services.

Throughout our research, we have reached a single conclusion: that Boston University's resources for coping with sexual assault are out of step with its peer institutions. ARPS would resolve this gap of interpersonal violence resources. The establishment of ARPS would allow the University to continue its history of attracting a diverse students body and providing a safe and inviting student community.

We have strong concerns that the treatment, recovery, and prevention of sexual assault for the University community are not being sufficiently addressed. The University has a duty to its community to provide adequate mental and physical health resources, programming for the prevention of sexual violence, and comprehensive, effective support in response to interpersonal violence.

ARPS Design

Role of the Counselors

Boston University currently employs two accomplished crisis counselors for all crises, including, but not limited to, interpersonal violence. Maureen Mahoney and Beth Kozik rotate on-call shifts to handle all student crises. We recognize that they are vital to both the prevention and treatment of interpersonal violence, and our request is twofold:

1. Boston University must hire at least 2 more full-time counselors that specialize in crises, trauma, and interpersonal violence.
2. Current counselors would need to be permitted, as much as they might professionally see fit, to be involved in the ARPS office's prevention efforts, as they have the years of experience and expertise to handle such responsibility, especially within the Boston University community.

Within the ARPS office, crisis counselors would be available 24/7. While the office is open, these counselors would hold counseling appointments but also assist walk-in students seeking services. An intake coordinator would also be required, and this person could be a social work or graduate fellowship student.

In addition, counselors would offer multiple support groups, though the content of these would be left to their discretion. We recommend that support groups for survivors, their families, and others affected by interpersonal violence be addressed through these counseling services.

Finally, counselors should work with the graduate fellows to establish a re-adjustment system for students that require it that builds official relationships with various members of the community in residence life, the BUPD, the Dean of Students, and other faculty, so that the student might have help in making the necessary changes to return to school, work, and social life and make a full recovery.

Medical Services

Those who experience interpersonal violence often need urgent medical attention. The staff in the ARPS office would be conscious of the medical services offered by local hospitals for survivors of trauma. Further, clinical staff should be trained as medical advocates, with a rotating on-call system (separate from the counseling hotline) for those who seeking medical services for interpersonal violence. An on-call system also offers another avenue for volunteership as students and community members can be trained as medical advocates to accompany clients to local hospitals, thus promoting the education of more first responders in the community.

Staffing

The staff at ARPS should have the capacity to involve full-time members, graduate students, and volunteers in both preventative and reactive measures. However, it must have a full-time programming director who specializes in trauma in order to promote the continuous availability of prevention and treatment services. If there were not a full-time, long-term director, ARPS would be subject to inconsistent administrative styles, thereby reducing its effectiveness as a constant provider. In addition, we request at least 2 (two) additional members of the Behavioral Medicine counseling staff, a full-time intake coordinator specifically for the ARPS office, and at least 2 (two) graduate fellows or other graduate students (such as social work or public health) who are looking to complete a practicum on campus. These students would report to the director of programming and would work on either prevention or counseling. The intake coordinator would specifically serve the needs of the ARPS office and represent the space and its services. This person would need to be extensively trained in understanding trauma as well as be comfortable with the responsibility of being the contact for all services that ARPS would provide. In respect of the important role Student Health Services has on campus and in order to not further increase the burden on Boston University's current crisis counselors, the ARPS office would require their own physical space separate from the space currently given to Behavioral Medicine clinicians.

Further, there is an enormous amount of potential for volunteership within the ARPS office. Groups of volunteers and constituents would be formed to address all aspects of interpersonal violence, ranging anywhere from a group of bystander trainers to a support group for male-identified survivors of sexual violence. Forming support groups and volunteer training both directly involve the community, and direct community involvement decreases the instance of interpersonal violence.

Judicial Proceedings and the BUPD

The BUPD is often the first line of receiving reports. While we understand that it has some training and specialization in its end of dealing with instances of sexual assault and interpersonal violence, we recommend that it receives extensive training on these issues from BARCC and certified ARPS staff. These trainings would increase BUPD's capacity to address interpersonal violence and would help create a working relationship between the BUPD and ARPS.

We recommend a zero-tolerance policy for all Boston University student perpetrators found guilty of sexual assault. All students, regardless of place of residence, would be held under this rule. We also recommend a stronger advocacy system within judicial affairs that would work with the center to assist those who come forward about interpersonal violence. This could be conducted through a network of peer support, a law students' advocacy group, or an official university system.

Prevention

Prevention is an essential part of the center. ARPS would feature consistent programming in the Boston University community, involving a strong educational aspect.

Sexual assault and interpersonal violence must be given more official time and attention during student orientation. Orientation sets the tone of the culture at Boston University, and interpersonal violence education would begin the process of preventing sexual assault on campus.

All prevention education would understand the relationship between power and rape. Sexuality is an integral part of recovery. Sex-positivity creates a productive discourse surrounding prevention, a "Yes Means Yes" conversation that teaches the Boston University community about consent.⁶ Sex positivity education and publicity would also extend to the queer community, and the ARPS office would include sex positivity and "Yes Means Yes" dialogue for people of every sexual orientation and every gender identification.

We believe that Orientation must allot at least 45 minutes to this topic. Presenters would speak on issues such as bystander trainings, consent education, "victim blaming" avoidance, and what to do in a crisis situation so incoming students might begin to understand that Boston University does not tolerate interpersonal violence in any form.

⁶ Friedman, Jaclyn, and Jessica Valenti. Yes Means Yes!: Visions of Female Sexual Power & A World Without Rape. N.p.: Seal Press, 2008.

We strongly support implementing mandatory education, similar to the education given in this proposed orientation, for all student leaders, staff, and faculty. Prominent members of the Boston University community are widely trusted by students, and educating these members of the community about sexual assault and providing them with the tools to direct and assist students would not only create a safer environment in which all members of the Boston University community feel that their needs will be met. We believe that training of this kind is essential in general and instrumental in creating a progressive and innovative ARPS office.

We also recommend an “Empowered Bystanders Training” program. This program would educate campus leaders on how to confront and stop interpersonal violence. This program would be offered to all leaders of student organizations, and would assist BU student leaders in creating positive change within their community. In addition, this program would and should be open to any students who want to partake. This program would ensure that campus events have trained empowered bystanders to prevent interpersonal violence and to help make our university safer.

Budget Requirements

We feel that ARPS would be able to function most efficiently within a physical space. A physical space would allow us to contain all of our resources in a community-accessible location, and would therefore provide resources efficiently and effectively to the entire Boston University community. The space must be accessible, central, well-known, and private. A location that fits these parameters should also provide room for the outreach, group counseling, and private office areas of ARPS as well as a close proximity to the CGSA and Behavioral Medicine offices currently used by the SHS crisis counselors. This space would require a central lobby, as well as several partitioned spaces to serve small counseling groups. Additionally, an effective space would include have multiple office spaces to serve as places for survivors to meet with crisis counselors in private.

The initial budget for the ARPS office would include cost of construction materials, labor, paint, and furniture. Following the creation of ARPS, its yearly budget would be comprised of daily operational costs. Staff salaries would be negotiable based on experience, and the workload of these staff members could be reduced by extended training for peer volunteers, and by making fellowships available for graduate students.

Evolution of the ARPS Office

Not only does this proposal seek to establish an assault response and prevention services office, but it hopes to make that office an essential part of campus life. In order for any effective and permanent change on campus, ARPS must become an active, far-reaching, and well-integrated organization. This office would not be isolated from the rest of the campus; rather, within five short years, many of the office's actions would become essential to the safety and progressiveness of Boston University.

By Spring 2017, we project an abridged sample of the center's developing programs and services as follows:

Spring 2012

- Advocates available by phone 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, to work with Boston University students and community members in need of immediate assistance.

Summer 2012

- An orientation campaign that educates incoming freshman on healthy relationships, sexual violence, communication, and social and cultural attitudes that shape attitudes regarding gender and sexuality. This orientation program would be offered to every incoming freshman, and would emphasize everyone's role in preventing interpersonal violence.

Fall 2012

- A fully functional ARPS space on campus with at least two crisis-trained professionals on staff around the clock, and multiple volunteers and interns manning phones, working in support groups, and creating a safe space on campus.
- An "Empowered Bystanders Training" program that would teach campus leaders how to interrupt, confront, and stop conflict and violence on campus.

Summer 2013

- The ARPS hotline number printed on the back of every Terrier card, therefore making it available to every student at a moment's notice.
- A working relationship with the BUPD that involves sensitivity training and trauma awareness for both officers and ARPS staff and volunteers.

- A series of workshops that would include but not be limited to dealing with and preventing sexual abuse and violence in relationships, encouraging consent in relationships, and dealing with the aftermath of sexual assault.

Peer universities at a glance

Brandeis

- Does not have a university sexual assault resource center and only a student-organized hotline, which involves on-call phone response for only four hours a day (10pm-2am). Multiple student newspaper (Brandeis Hoot) articles have illuminated a need for the administration to improve its sexual assault policies and for the university to provide resources for a safer student environment. (<http://thebrandeishoot.com/articles/10828>; <http://thebrandeishoot.com/articles/6728>)

Emory

- Does not have a physical space for students and relies on referrals to various departments and services. Student voices raise concern that sexual assault is a silent issue on campus and that students do not feel supported on campus despite increased community response. Those seeking services appear overwhelmed and in need of direct response. Recently, their Student Health Services has been focussing strategy on increasing direct access to counselors and increasing educational efforts, especially in the form of staff and faculty training. Syracuse

- Extensive resources available to students, as mentioned in the main text, and is staffed by two full-time staff, a half-time graduate assistant, a shared administrative assistant, and 8 staff volunteers. At least 70-80 dedicated volunteers are involved. <http://advocacycenter.syr.edu/>

University of Southern California

- The USC Center for Women and Men is staffed by a Director, Assistant Director, Program Coordinator, a master's intern, and a Graduate Program Assistant. The Center is associated with the Department of Student Affairs. (<http://www.usc.edu/student-affairs/cwm/index.html>)

University of Pennsylvania

- Penn offers only basic services through their Division of Public Safety - Special Services Unit, which offers escorting to hospitals and help in filing reports. However, the Penn Women's Center has five staff, six work-study students, and a graduate assistant. (<http://www.vpul.upenn.edu/pwc/aboutus.php>)

Tufts University

- A Sexual Violence Resources Coordinator, in the Health Services department, provides non-confidential information, and a Sexual Assault Clinician keeps regular office hours in the Health Services department. Campus police will page a counselor on-call at all hours. While the University has a network of cultural and specialized centers, there is no specific sexual assault center. (<http://ase.tufts.edu/healthed/topicsSexualOnCampus.htm>)

Harvard

- The Office of Sexual Assault Prevention and Response (OSAPR), founded in 2003, is renown for its services and breadth of scope. With three staff members, OSAPR works to strengthen and provide services for survivors and their friends and family, support survivors rights, works to be inclusive in its staff, volunteers, and constituents, collaborates with organizations in the Harvard community to prevent and eradicate sexual assault, and provides research and data on sexual assault. Their office is on the Harvard main campus and it offers a 24 hour crisis hotline. (<http://www.osapr.harvard.edu/icb/icb.do>)

Boston College

- Boston College runs the Sexual Assault Network, (SANet), a hotline of student volunteers and professional staff to field crisis calls. SANet is a joint project in the Office of the Dean for Student Development and the Women's Center. In addition to SANet, BC offers an extensive Bystander Education program, through the Student Affairs department.

<http://www.bc.edu/offices/odsd/wrc/pandr/SANet.html>

George Washington University

- George Washington University offers the Sexual Assault Crisis Consultation (SACC) Team, a team of faculty, staff, and graduate students that volunteer to respond to survivors through a hotline system. Student volunteers are trained separately on how to respond to survivors of sexual assault through the Alcohol and Drug Education program. It's organizer is in the Police Department, but the program goes beyond the scope of GWPD. The SACC team was started in 1999 after a task force was called in 1992 to investigate sexual assault by the then-police chief, Delores Stafford.

<http://gwired.gwu.edu/saccteam/team/>

Northeastern

- The Violence Support, Intervention, and Outreach Network (ViSION) at Northeastern University is housed under the University Health and Counseling Services department. ViSION offers a hotline, as well as serves as a group to hose resources and services for Northeastern Students.

<http://www.northeastern.edu/uahcs/vision/index.html>

Columbia

- Founded in 1991, the The Rape Crisis/Anti-Violence Support Center (RC/AVSC) at Columbia University is in the Student Health Department. The RC/AVSC provides peer counseling, advocacy, and education to the entire University community. (<http://health.columbia.edu/services/svprp/rcavsc>)

Northwestern

- The Center for Awareness, Response, and Education at Northwestern University was launched in September 2011, after a needs assessment done by the Campus Coalition on Sexual Violence, as formed by the Vice President of Student Affairs in June 2012. It employs two full time staff, one director for response, and another director for education and prevention. CARE offers an array of programming, including Sexual Health and Assault Peer Educators (SHAPE), which hosts educational, events, and dialogues, Men Against Rape and Sexual Assault (MARS), University Health Services and the Office of Fraternity and Sorority Life; education and awareness. The Campus Coalition on Sexual Violence (CCSV) was formed in May 2010, and received a federal grant in 2011. (<http://www.northwestern.edu/care/>)

New York University

- NYU does not offer institutionalized resources for sexual assault care and prevention, but does have counselors in the student health department to care for students on a case by case basis. (<http://www.nyu.edu/999/faqs/sexualassault.html>)

Name	City	State	Zip	Country	Signed	Comment
Ariana Katz	Boston	MA	2215	United States	3/5/2012	I'm signing this petition in support of survivors, and in support of growth at Boston University. I'm taking a stand against rape culture.
Andrew Weaver	Boston	MA	2215	United States	3/5/2012	I sign to help put a stop to rape culture on campus and provide proactive measures as opposed to just reactive ones.
Eleanor Donahue	Hingham	MA	2043	United States	3/5/2012	We need this.
Allison Francis	Alliston	MA	2134	United States	3/5/2012	Boston University must take immediate direct action to acknowledge sexual assault issues on campus & provide support for survivors of sexual assault.
Nikitasha Aggarwal	Allentown	PA	18104	United States	3/5/2012	A task squad to investigate the hockey team isn't going to bring light to rape culture. Instead, it serves as a way to hush up the situation overall.
Katie Sheldon	Alliston	MA	2134	United States	3/5/2012	I always found it frankly shocking that BU, a world-class school in many respects, had no specifically designated Rape Crisis Center. As an alumna I hope for the safety and well-being of future BU students that such a center is established ASAP.
Lauren Wise	Boston	MA	2215	United States	3/5/2012	I fully support the establishment of a rape crisis center at Boston University!

Alveena Shah	Boston	MA		2118	United States	3/5/2012	At a large, urban university where over 60% of the population is made up of women, centers like this should be standard.
Meghan Faulkner	Boston	MA		2215	United States	3/5/2012	I'm signing because I'm a proud BU alum who believes BU could do much more to support survivors.
Gillian Emily	Boston	MA		2215	United States	3/5/2012	I'm signing this petition because I believe that every Boston University student deserves a safe learning environment, and that rape culture should not be allowed to fester in any institution.
Elise Francis	Portland	OR		97239	United States	3/5/2012	Because women deserve better!
Eli Katz	Rydal	PA		19046	United States	3/5/2012	I am the brother of a BU student, and I believe that a center like this is an incredibly important and necessary resource.
Rebecca Krause	Boston	MA		2215	United States	3/5/2012	It is disgusting that this petition is necessary. Stop money-grubbing and take care of the students whose lives are in your hands. Take a good look at your suicide and depression statistics and realize that it your own hostile environment that is to blame.
Katelyn Reinert	Boston	MA		2215	United States	3/5/2012	I'm signing because it is common sense.

Julien Jacquelin	Boston	MA		2215	United States	3/5/2012	I am signing this petition because even after the press dies down from the recent events, the scars of sexual assault will last and their must be safer spaces for everyone who goes through this.
Natasha Maingot	Brantford		N3S 4B6		Canada	3/5/2012	cause every university needs a place where they can go, if this happens to them, so they dont feel victimized and that they get the support they need
Anne Pierce	Boston	MA		2215	United States	3/5/2012	To support my fellow sisters here on this earth.
Amelia Catone	Boston	MA		2215	United States	3/5/2012	I am signing because this is overdue and deeply necessary.
JackLun Gil	North Providence	RI		2904	United States	3/5/2012	As a Boston area college student, I cannot believe BU does not have a center such as the one being proposed. This is an absolutely necessity.
Michelle Weiser	Allston	MA		2134	United States	3/5/2012	I'm signing because I pay $50,000/year to go to BU and I deserve to feel safe on campus and know that my tuition is going toward things I actually care about and need.

DeAnna Baumle	Boston	MA		2215	United States	3/5/2012	I am signing for all the survivors who feel they have no where to go. I am signing so they know they are not alone, so they know we care, and most importantly, so that EVERYONE can learn that IT IS NOT THEIR FAULT.
Kathryn Risolo	Hewlett	NY		11557	United States	3/5/2012	I've been sexually assaulted and I know what that can do to someone.
Rob Cohen	Boston	MA		2120	United States	3/6/2012	To stand in solidarity with my friends at BU
eliza martin	Portland	ME		4103	United States	3/6/2012	its necessary for the safety of all!
Brian Lin	Providence	RI		2912	United States	3/6/2012	Let BU do better than the national attack on women's rights. Open this center for everyone!
Jennifer Kole	Boston	MA		2215	United States	3/6/2012	Sexual assault and rape is prevalent in the university, despite low report statistics. A center will allow student awareness and foster a protective environment for all.
Awo Sumah	Boston	MA		2215	United States	3/6/2012	I am signing because rape survivors should not be disposable. Boston University has a responsibility to show its rape survivors justice and care.
Kristen Gast	Orangevale	CA		95662	United States	3/6/2012	I hope to attend Boston University next year. and, god forbid, if something should happen to me or a classmate, I'd like to be taken care of.

Darienne Nicholas	Baton Rouge	LA	70803	United States	3/6/2012	Because this is important and I have friends who go to this university. They deserve the same sort of awareness, protection and help that I get at my school.
Mike Tressler	Fort Collins	CO	80526	United States	3/6/2012	My daughter attends the University. I would have thought this was already available and support the establishment of the rape crisis center.
Mark Isley	Decatur	IL	62526	United States	3/6/2012	To help support the cause of human rights and end oppression and to perpetuate change! All oppression creates a state of war. All life is occupied in both perpetuating itself and in surpassing itself; if all it does is maintain itself, then living is only not dying.
BIANEY RAMIREZ	REVERE	MA	2151	United States	3/6/2012	It would allow student awareness and foster a safe open environment for all. The proposition of such a center is not a luxury, but a necessity given the rape culture present in colleges, especially at BU.
Ariel Warmflash	Washington	DC	20052	United States	3/6/2012	Because no one should have to go through anything alone.

evan martinez	hingham	MA	2043	United States	3/6/2012	I'm signing to stand in solidarity with my friends at BU in their efforts to create a safe space to better serve students. A rape crisis center is a necessary aspect of a university just like a classroom or access to books. Our tuition money should be more efficiently spent on institutions such as these rather than useless renovations to buildings. As a male student at BU, I am ashamed of the recent assault cases on campus, and fully support the creation of the rape crisis center.
Camilo Pardo	Boston	MA	2215	United States	3/6/2012	A rape crisis center is a necessary aspect of a university just like a classroom or access to books. Our tuition money should be more efficiently spent on institutions such as these rather than useless renovations to buildings. As a male student at BU, I am ashamed of the recent assault cases on campus, and fully support the creation of the rape crisis center.
Camilo Pardo	Boston	MA	2215	United States	3/6/2012	I was raped and I had nothing to really help me. Girls (and guys) could desperately use this.
Corrine Cousineau	West Kingston	RI	2892	United States	3/6/2012

Rea Sowan	Boston	MA	2215	United States	3/6/2012	I am signing this petition because Syracuse had a Rape Crisis Center before I was born. The first step in confronting rape culture is to acknowledge the reality of sexual violence in our community-- A rape crisis center not only acknowledges that reality, but provides support to survivors in a way that challenges predominant victim blaming narratives.
Elizabeth Dake	Tucson	AZ	85719	United States	3/6/2012	There needs to be a safe place where people who have been sexually abused can go. Please please please understand this. This could be a place that could help people heal from trauma.
Sassy Jensen	Amherst	MA	1002	United States	3/6/2012	This is necessary for Boston University, especially as a school that prides itself on having great resources for its students.
Emily Rooker	Boston	MA	2215	United States	3/6/2012	I can't believe they don't have this already. I think in light of everything, it would be a good idea to implement.
Katie Grillon	Allston	MA	2134	United States	3/6/2012

Marie McGwier	Aliston	MA	2134	United States	3/6/2012	I am signing this petition because the establishment of these types of resources will enable more people to seek the help they need, not only to survive, but to be able to maintain their strength. No person should feel unable to work towards healing simply because of a lack of the proper establishment.
Tara Blumstein	Boston	MA	2115	United States	3/6/2012	People need a place to land after a sexual assault. It is traumatizing, and if that place is one campus then it is a lot more accessible. Simply, there is a need! An unfortunately desperate need...
Molly Rokosz	merrimac	MA	1860	United States	3/6/2012	Common sense, caring sense.
Marry Angela	Los Angeles	CA	90041	United States	3/6/2012	It's crucial.
Natalie Wilcox	Portland	OR	97210	United States	3/6/2012	All institutions should have this and it is shame that it has not been implemented at BU so far.

Andrew Blough	Boston	MA	2134	United States	3/6/2012	Having friends who are survivors of sexual assault, I have seen the extensive traumatic impact it can have on a life, often in ways not immediately recognizable to the victim him/herself. Seeking help elsewhere can be costly, time consuming and further add to a survivor's discomfort (&it:--understatement); counseling made readily available by an institution with which a person is already associated can help massively to alleviate these issues. Without the rape crisis center near my university's campus, I likely would have committed suicide after I was raped. Its existence is a comfort that everyone deserves.
Hannah Kane	Manchester	IA	52057	United States	3/7/2012

Ruheeh Bhalwani	EDISON	NJ	8817	United States	3/7/2012	Rape is a very real problem that unfortunately still exists. Having a center such as this not only allows men & women who have been affected to know that they are correct to feel that they have been wronged, but that they can come forward and seek help to move forward. I fully support opening up a rape crisis center to also spread awareness among the entire community that RAPE IS NOT OK and BU wants to advocate this.
James Boggie	Boston	MA	2132	United States	3/7/2012	I am signing this petition because I could not in good conscience recommend that any of my four sisters attend BU without a rape crisis center.
Jamie Cerretti	Roslindale	MA	2131	United States	3/7/2012	graduated from BU in 02; we were working on getting a rape crisis center 10 years ago! it's long overdue.
Pinar Batlas	Kyrenia		0	Cyprus	3/7/2012	I want women everywhere to be safe and to have support when something awful happens. I'd like to study in BU one day, but even if I don't get to, setting up a rape crisis center at such a large institution would definitely help many women.

Micaela Chelemer	Tenafly	NJ		7670	United States	3/7/2012	The fact that this doesn't exist already is an embarrassment to this university. BU has the obligation to make sure all victims and survivors of domestic abuse, rape, and other violence receive the appropriate support. I am signing this because I have friends at BU who are affected by the schools (lack of) resources for victims. Everyone deserves to feel safe and protected by the universities they choose to attend.
Adrian Budhu	Boston	MA		2116	United States	3/7/2012	My family and I are alumni of BU--both undergraduate and graduate. My own father taught at BU. I teach at a university and want to see all students free to grow and flourish in a safe and supportive environment. We have seen the consequences of what happens when the social and physical environments are oppressive to students. This can be addressed simply--with the creation of a physical and social space called a rape crisis center.
Morgan Horowitz	Northridge	CA		91324	United States	3/8/2012
Elise Brenner	Newton	MA		2466	United States	3/8/2012

Liz Metzger	chicago	IL	60614	United States	3/9/2012	I am signing this petition because this is an issue that was being fought for before I was a BU student, during my time as a BU student and now as an alum. It's long overdue for BU to step up and support its students. As can be seen by recent events and from past experiences, sexual assault is as much of a problem on the BU campus as it is in the greater community and city. We need a space that allows for women and men to seek help and refuge when they fall victim to this terrible fate. A center of this nature would also send an important message to perpetrators - that any form of sexual assault is intolerable and the community will support and protect its people.
Bethany Saul	Orchard Park	NY	NY 14127	United States	3/9/2012

Jesse Deshayes	Jamaica Plain	MA	2130	United States	3/9/2012	I am signing because it is terrifying to ask for help. If someone has the courage to ask for help and support after sexual assault, or even attempted sexual assault, then they deserve a compassionate human voice on the first try--not an answering service, not a series of referrals. Making the first call can be hard enough. How many people do you think stop calling after that first one?
Katherine Phelps	Waltham	MA	2451	United States	3/9/2012	Because not signing is irresponsible and change is the ONLY option.
Jen Brown	Berlin		10823	Germany	3/10/2012	BU...I am kind of ashamed of everything I've heard that has happened in recent months... please do something about it. The tuition is WAY too high to not have something like this already in place.
Mary Shaffer	Columbus	OH	43215	United States	3/10/2012	I can't believe there isn't a center to help rape victims. Men and women should be treated but I have a real hatred against counselors who sell their souls to law enforcement in order to save their jobs and their unions

Jennifer Perrone	Allston	MA	2134	United States	3/10/2012	as a rape crisis counselor in Boston, I see the need for more resources outside of the one wonderful center that exists. and that resource should come from and be tied to the specific community that it serves. this is totally necessary!
Paul Foster	Perkasie	PA	18944	United States	3/10/2012	I attended BU, and heard too many stories of friends of mine dealing with rape or sexual assault, without having a place to go on campus.
Miles Martin	Somerville	MA	2143	United States	3/10/2012	To bring BU's capacity to protect students' mental and physical health proudly up to date.
Nora Philbin	Boston	MA	2115	United States	3/10/2012	I love BU and am so glad that I go to school here but I find it incredibly difficult to support its school that is not properly supporting its students. This would be a giant step in the right direction.
Leilani Crane	Philadelphia	PA	19104	United States	3/10/2012	I am a psychologist in a university counseling center and a mother. A rape crisis center is essential.
Sarah Dickerson	Moscow	ID	83843	United States	3/12/2012	Because there shouldn't even have to be a petition about this
Bessie Steinberg	Farmington	CT	6032	United States	3/13/2012	Because it's the right thing for our school.

Elisa Gill	Allston	MA	2134	United States	3/13/2012	I am a BU student and believe this is a crucial resource. A university without a place whose sole purpose is to prevent sexual assault and support survivors is not a safe one. Let's look to Harvard and get this on our campus!
Shabab Mirza	Portland	OR	97202	United States	3/13/2012	As a former student at BU, and as a concerned community member, I urge the BU administration to take action on this matter.
Elizabeth Roberts	Omaha	NE	68130	United States	3/13/2012	It is vital that campuses provide these care services to survivors. Assault and rape are campus problems that call for campus solutions and support--to refuse to provide that is to further and deepen the stigma and trauma that survivors already go through.
Yekaterina B	Brooklyn	NY	11210	United States	3/13/2012	I'm a BU and WRC alum!
Janna Mehdi Zimmermann	Wellesley	MA	2481	United States	3/13/2012	Because women's health is universal.
Alexandra Forero	Pico Rivera	CA	90660	United States	3/13/2012	BU needs to care about it's students, not just their pockets...even if they have to be forced to.
Elyse Mancuso	Omaha	NE	68130	United States	3/13/2012	I am interested in applying to BU next fall, and I would rather go to a school that helps all its students to be safe and healthy.

Gabriela Stojaspal	Willowbrook	IL	60527	United States	3/13/2012	I was raped and I only wish there was a safe haven for me to turn to for the help I needed.
Hannah Remer	Omaha	NE	68144	United States	3/14/2012	A rape crisis center is needed. Any victim of rape, guys or girls, needs a safe place to go to. Providing this at a university is necessary and would be beneficial.
Charlotte Saul	Orchard Park	NY	14127	United States	3/16/2012	As a young woman and as a BU student, I believe that this service is vital.
Masato Muso	boston	MA	2215	United States	3/30/2012	Considering the fees we pay and, more importantly, the necessity of such a service, I am signing this petition.
Kathy Reboul, MSW	Winchester	MA	1890	United States	3/31/2012	Because I'm an Ally. Statistically college age women at an increased risk for rape. In fact one in five women is sexual assaulted in college. And the response a victim (of any gender) gets immediately and soon after an attack directly affect their level of trauma in the long run.
Patricia Downer	Beverly	MA	1915	United States	4/2/2012	This is something that every university should have. Considering recent events, there is clearly a need for this at BU. As a BU alum, I am actually more than a little bothered to find out that something like this doesn't exist already.
