Students can double major with two of the three COM departments: Film and Television, Mass Communication, Advertising and Public Relations, and Journalism. (Note: Students cannot double major within the same department, example: a student cannot double major with Public Relations and Advertising, they are considered specializations within the same major of Communication.

- Students can declare the double major program sophomore year
- We strongly suggest that students complete one course within each of the two COM majors they are interested in pursuing PRIOR to declaring the College of Communication Double Major Program
- Foundation requirements (including CO 101 and CO 201) and CAS concentration can be shared between both majors
- A grade of C or higher in CO 101 is required to major or double major within COM Students cannot major and minor within the same department
- No courses counting toward a COM specific major can be used toward the second COM major. Example: FT 544 Documentary Production cannot count toward both a student’s Film/TV major and Journalism major
- Students will need to complete a total of 18 COM courses toward their majors (9 in each of major department) not including CO 101 and CO 201
- Double major program does not apply to Cinema and Media Studies program.
- Students must complete the required 128 credits to graduate
- Students must maintain a 2.0 Overall GPA and 2.0 COM GPA to graduate
- With the successful completion of both majors students will receive one diploma with both majors listed.
- An advising meeting with a COM Advisor is required to declare the double major program through COM Undergraduate Affairs. Please call 617-353-3471 to schedule an appointment.
