Join us for a reading and conversation with Polish author Hubert Klimko-Dobrzaniecki and translator Julia Sherwood.

Klimko-Dobrzaniecki is a novelist and poet who has lived outside Poland for many years (formerly in Iceland, and now in Austria). He is author of Bielawa West Station (2003), Roza's House. Krysvik (2006), The Lunatic (2007); the novella Lullaby for a Hanged Man (2007); the novels One Two Three (2007), First Things (2009) and Bornholm, Bornholm (2011); and two volumes of poetry written in Icelandic.

Julia Sherwood was born and grew up in Bratislava, then Czechoslovakia. After working for Amnesty International for over 20 years and travelling widely in Eastern and Central Europe, she became a freelance translator in 2008. Based in London, she is editor-at-large with Asymptote, the international journal of translation.
