Monday, June 27, 12 to 2 PM

Britain will hold a referendum on June 23 on whether the country will leave the European Union. Join us for a discussion of the election results with Graham Wilson, Professor of Political Science at Boston University, and Peter Moloney, Visiting Assistant Professor of History at Boston College.

Wilson's areas of specialization include American Politics, Comparative Politics, Business and Government, and Interest Groups. Moloney studies the evolution of modern international governance, focusing on the European Union and its forerunner, the European Economic Community (EEC). He is developing a manuscript on the controversy of the 1975 British referendum on EEC membership and its impact on the future direction of the Community.

Lunch is provided. RSVP to edamrien@bu.edu.
