Join us for a lunch discussion with Ambassador Alexander “Sandy” Vershbow. Prior to his post as as Deputy Secretary General of NATO, Ambassador Vershbow served for three years as the US assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs. In that position, he was responsible for coordinating US security and defense policies relating to the nations and international organizations of Europe (including NATO), the Middle East, and Africa. He served as US ambassador to NATO (1998-2001); to the Russian Federation (2001-05); and to the Republic of Korea (2005-08). Presently, he is a distinguished fellow at the Brent Scowcroft Center on International Security at the Atlantic Council in Washington.

Ambassador Vershbow will be joined in conversation by Igor Lukes, Professor of History and International Relations at Boston University, and Vesko Garcevic, Professor of the Practice of International Relations at Boston University and Former Ambassador of Montenegro in Brussels (NATO) and Vienna (OSCE).
