During the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, a metropolis was so much more than a town with extra people in it. It had become a fundamentally new kind of historical settlement, one that captured the worst problems and the most exciting possibilities of the modern age. What political, cultural, economic, and environmental consequences did these great hubs have? What did it take for so many to reside in such close proximity?

In this seminar we will think about cities as more than inert containers or simple backdrops for human activities. We will study them as physical and social spaces, distinctive terrains from which people made up their sense of self, their lives, their work, and their play. We will try to figure out just what made metropolitan life seem so exciting, so daunting, so provocative in this moment of rapid urbanization and industrialization. Our primary focus will be on American locations (New York, Boston, Chicago, New Orleans, San Francisco), but great cities everywhere faced similar issues, so we will also occasionally stray abroad.

Each week’s readings will present a variety of topics and scholarly methods by drawing from the research of leading urban cultural historians. In class, we will build on this work and practice our own skills of creative historical inquiry by analyzing an array of primary sources, including newspapers, fiction, film, photographs, sociological investigation, and urban space itself.
COURSE MATERIALS

Most readings will be available on Blackboard Learn. In addition, the following books are available for purchase at the Bookstore:

- Catherine McNeur, Taming Manhattan: Environmental Battles in the Antebellum City (Harvard University Press, 2014)
- Eric Avila, The Folklore of the Freeway: Race and Revolt in the Modernist City (University of Minnesota Press, 2014)

REQUIREMENTS

<table> <thead>
<tr>
<th>Assignment</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>First essay (4 pages)</td>
<td>20%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Second essay (8-10 pages)</td>
<td>30%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Third essay (revision and expansion, 12-15 pages)</td>
<td>20%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Class participation (including presentation)</td>
<td>20%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Final Reflection (3 pages)</td>
<td>10%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Proposal and bibliography (1-2 pages)</td>
<td>Required</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Attendance</td>
<td>Required</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

To pass the course, you must complete and pass all of the assignments.

Graduate students will be expected to adhere to a modified set of requirements discussed after class.

LATE PAPERS will be penalized one-third grade per day (example: a B paper that is one day late becomes a B-). All students are required to keep copies of their graded essays until the end of the semester.

PLAGIARISM: Remember that plagiarism is a serious offense, and it’s your responsibility to know and understand the provisions of the CAS Academic Conduct Code. Plagiarism is subject to serious sanctions, including reprimand, suspension, and expulsion. Cases of suspected academic misconduct in this course will be referred to the Dean’s Office. For a detailed description of Boston University’s rules, consult the code of conduct at http://www.bu.edu/academics/policies/academic-conduct-code/

ATTENDANCE: This is an advanced, 500-level course designed for history concentrators. As such, this seminar demands a greater level of preparation, effort, and commitment than a regular lecture class. You are expected to attend every session, to arrive on time, and to remain for the entire class period. Students are required to attend every session—there will be no unexcused absences. If you are unable to attend a meeting (due to illness or family emergency), it is your obligation to contact the instructor in advance. If you miss more than three class meetings for any reason, you cannot receive credit for this course.
SCHEDULE OF CLASSES AND READINGS

Week 1 (January 23): Reading Cities

Excerpts about the city and democracy

In class: Sketch of a Paris apartment building (1843)

Week 2 (January 30): Deadly Places

Schwartz, “Public Visits to the Morgue,” in Spectacular Realities (1998)

In class: Stephen Crane, “When a Man Falls a Crowd Gathers” (1894)

Week 3 (February 6): Crime and Class

Halttunen, Confidence Men and Painted Women (1982), chapters 1-2

In class: Plunkitt of Tammany Hall (1905)

Week 4 (February 13): Smelly Infrastructure

In class: etchings and photographs from Edinburgh to Shanghai
Proposal due Thursday, Feb. 15, by 5pm as an electronic Word document: bblower@bu.edu

Week 5 (February 27): Adventures in Governing

Anbinder, “‘We Will Dirk Every Mother’s Son of You’: Five Points and the Irish Conquest of New York Politics,” Éire-Ireland 36.1 (2001)

In class: A Trip Down Market Street, footage of San Francisco, 1906

First essay due Thursday, Mar. 1, by 5pm as an electronic Word document: bblower@bu.edu

Week 6 (March 13): Quests for Order

McNeur, “Clearing the Lungs of the City” in Taming Manhattan (2014)

In class: maps

Week 7 (March 20): Repertoires of Protest

Traugott, “The Insurgent Barricade” (2010)

In class: Anderson, “The Soapbox and the Open Forum,” in The Hobo (1923)
Week 8 (March 27): City Rebels

Stansell, “Bohemian Beginnings in the 1890s” in American Moderns

Chauncey, Gay New York, chapters 1 and 7

In class: Chicago Vice Commission report (1911)

Second essay (hard copy) due Wednesday, March 28, by 3pm to my box in the history office, 3rd floor of 226 Bay State.

Week 9 (April 3): Work and Commerce

Harris, “Black Women, Urban Labor, and New York’s Informal Economy” in Sex Workers, Psychics, and Numbers Runners

In class: classifieds

Week 10 (April 10): Writing Workshop I

Week 11 (April 17): Writing Workshop II

Final research paper due Wednesday, April 18, by noon to my box in the history department office, 3rd floor of 226 Bay State.

Week 12 (April 24): The Fate of the Modern Metropolis, Part I: Byways and Neighborhoods

In class: Magic Highway (1958); graffiti art
Week 13 (May 1): The Fate of the Modern Metropolis, Part II: Disaster Returns

In class: movie clips

Final reflection due Friday, May 4, by noon as an electronic Word document: bblower@bu.edu
GUIDELINES FOR THE ASSIGNMENTS

Research Project. The main assignment for this course is an independent research paper on an unusual event, a terrible disaster, a bygone activity, a curious type of urban character, or some other small, strange urban thing. Despite your topic’s seeming obscurity, why is it important? What problems and/or possibilities did it raise for city dwellers? What can it tell us about life in the modern metropolis?

Ground rules: The weirder the better. Your research can extend to any city (even if we haven’t read about it in class), but your topic must fall between roughly 1800 and 1945, since that is the period we are learning about.

Other course assignments will build up to, or branch out from, the research paper. All written work should be double-spaced, with one-inch margins and Times 12 pt. font. Use footnotes in the Chicago Manual of Style format.

Proposal and bibliography (1-2 pages). Pitch your proposed research topic. What strange or forgotten event, object, person, or practice do you want to write about? Why do you think it is going to be interesting? What kinds of sources have you found so far? What are you still hoping to find, and what problems are you facing in developing a clear argument? Attach an annotated bibliography of the sources you expect to use.

Oral presentation. Share your work-in-progress with the class in a brief five-minute presentation. Using handouts or images is encouraged. Articulate your main findings so far and solicit feedback and advice in areas where you are still struggling.

First essay (4 pages). Offer a close analysis of a single primary source (the most illuminating one you’ve found for the research project) and put it in a broader historical context. Pick it apart and say something original about it. Analyze its overt and implied messages, and determine how it communicates those messages. In order to develop a compelling and arguable thesis for your paper, reflect on how your source relates to the readings we’ve done and the themes we have discussed in class. If your source had been used in class, what would we have talked about? What does it teach us about the urban past? How does the knowledge you are gaining about nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century city life enhance your understanding of this source and allow you to unearth insights from it that you might otherwise have overlooked?

Second essay (8-10 pages), plus cover letter explaining what you are trying to do and how you think it worked out. Craft an independent research paper on an unusual event, a terrible disaster, a bygone activity, a curious type of urban character, or some other small, strange urban thing. Despite your topic’s seeming obscurity, why is it important? What problems and/or possibilities did it raise for city dwellers? What can it tell us about life in the modern metropolis? A strong essay will not only rest on an impressive body of research but also go beyond providing a simple summary report. It will demonstrate the writer’s interest in the topic and ability to engage the material by formulating an insightful thesis, backed up by compelling evidence and analysis.
Third essay (12-15 pages), plus cover letter detailing your revision process. This should be a substantially altered and augmented revision of the second essay, in light of feedback received and work done in the writing workshops.

Final reflection (3 pages). Spend an hour at a public space, anywhere in the Boston area, and take notes, sketch, etc. Study the site—note the way it is organized, the types of uses it was designed for, as well as the complicated ways in which it is actually used. How does this public space compare to some of the ones you’ve studied from the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries? What has changed? How would the authors we read during the last two weeks of class interpret your site?

RESEARCH TOPIC IDEAS

automats bathrooms barber shops, hairdressers, beauty parlors barkers billboards, ticker tape signs bootblacks bootlegging bridges, canals bugs car crashes disasters: blizzards, fires, floods, etc.
dog catchers docks, wharves drag balls drinking fountains elevators, escalators edemics evictions fire escapes, hydrants funerals, funeral parlors, cemeteries gas lighting, electricity gangs, gangsters garbage collectors, scavengers, ragpickers home delivery services: ice, milk, etc.
homeless shelters, flophouses horseshoers, stablekeepers hospitals, sanatoriums ice cream parlors, candy stores launder lines, laudry mats libraries, museums lunch mannequins, window displays murders, suicides opium or reefer dens orphanages parking etiquette info wagons pawn shops, fences peeping toms
penny press, tabloids pigeons, pigeon coops prisons, police stations, courts psychics, fortunetellers public baths, pools railroad or subway stations seasons, holidays in the city sewers, cesspools sidewalks, paving, manhole covers sleighs, sleds soapbox, stepladder orators squatters stoops storefront churches street performers, itinerant traders street sweepers subways, trolley cars, cable cars tango pirates, gigolos, pimps tattoo parlors taxicabs telephone booths traffic lights, control waiters, bartenders water towers, waterworks zoos, pet markets
GRADING

Essays will be evaluated according to the following criteria:

An “A” range essay is both ambitious and successful. It presents a perceptive and independent thesis backed up by well-chosen evidence, a creative and compelling use of sources, and sensitivity to historical context. Written with grace and confidence, it is the kind of paper that could be read aloud in class. It demonstrates that the writer has grappled seriously with the issues of the course, has done a close, critical reading of the texts, and has synthesized the readings and discussions.

A “B” range essay is one that is ambitious but only partially successful, or one that achieves modest aims well. It may demonstrate many of the aspects of A-level work, but falls short in organizational clarity, the formulation and presentation of its argument, or the depth of source analysis. It exhibits a command of course material and understanding of historical context and contains flashes of insight but lacks consistency in the writing or depth in the argument.

A “C” range essay has significant problems in articulating and presenting its thesis, or seems to lack a central thesis entirely. Oftentimes, C-range papers offer little more than a summary of information covered in the course, or they might prove insensitive to historical context, contain factual errors, unclear writing, poor organization, or insufficient evidence.

A “D” essay, in addition to displaying the shortcomings of a C-range paper, also fails to grapple seriously with either ideas or texts, or fails to address the expectations of the assignment. A D essay suggests serious insufficient command of the course material.

An “F” essay falls short in the manner of a “D” essay. It is also often significantly shorter than the assigned length, does not demonstrate even a glint of potentially original thought, and suggests a lack of effort or no competence in the material at hand.

Participation grades will be evaluated according to the following criteria:

A student who receives an A for participation typically comes to every class with perceptive insights about the readings. An “A” discussant engages with the ideas of others, respects the opinions of others, and consistently elevates the level of discussion.

A student who receives a B for participation comes to class with less well-prepared insights and waits passively for others to raise interesting issues. A “B” discussant, while courteous and articulate, does not adequately listen to other participants or relate their comments to the direction of the conversation.

A student who receives a C for discussion attends regularly but typically is an infrequent or unwilling participant in discussion. A student who fails to attend seminars on time and regularly or who fails to be adequately prepared for discussion risks the grade of D or F.
HI568: The Modern Metropolis—First Day Handout

I think our governments will remain virtuous for many centuries as long as they are chiefly agricultural; and this will be as long as there shall be vacant lands in any part of America. When they get plied upon one another in large cities, as in Europe, they will become corrupt as in Europe... The mobs of great cities add just so much to support of pure government as sores do to the strength of the human body. —Thomas Jefferson

The tumultuous populace of large cities are ever to be dreaded. Their indiscriminate violence prostrates for the time all public authority, and its consequences are sometimes extensive and terrible. —George Washington

The country life is to be preferr’d; for there we see the works of God; but in cities little else but the works of men. —William Penn

Cities are the abyss of the human species. —Jean Jacques Rousseau

We do not look in our great cities for our best morality. —Jane Austen

Cities force growth and make people talkative and entertaining, but they also make them artificial. —Ralph Waldo Emerson

Towns are excrescences, gray fluxions, where men, hurrying to find one another, have lost themselves. —E. M. Forster

When the Stranger says: "What is the meaning of this city? Do you huddle close together because you love each other?" What will you answer? "We all dwell together To make money from each other"? or "This is a community"? —T. S. Eliot

City life is millions of people being lonesome together. —Henry David Thoreau

The United States was born in the country but has moved to the city. —Richard Hofstadter “City,’ the word, comes to us from the Latin (civitas), but the city as an entity was an ancient Greek invention under the name of polis. Almost all our political vocabulary, from ‘political’ on, is rooted therefore in the ancient Greek city, and it was within that very special cultural context that democracy, another Greek political invention, was born.”
— François Hartog

City air makes you free. — Medieval German adage

The chief function of the city is to convert power into form, energy into culture, dead matter into the living symbols of art, biological reproduction into social creativity.
— Lewis Mumford

All great art is born of the metropolis. — Ezra Pound

We will neglect our cities to our peril, for in neglecting them we neglect the nation.
— John F. Kennedy

"If the city is both the producer of citizenship and the generator of innovation, it is therefore the soil in which democracy lives, progresses and responds to new challenges. Without the city, the place that maximizes exchanges between people, democracy loses its strength to create potential futures and promote current actions. The city is the past, present and future of democracy."
— Jordi Borja

"The influences which cities exert upon the social life of man are greater than the ratio of the urban population would indicate, for the city is not only in ever larger degrees the dwelling-place and workshop of modern man, but it is the initiating and controlling center of economic, political, and cultural life that has drawn the most remote parts of the world into its orbit and woven diverse areas, peoples, and activities into a cosmos."
— Louis Wirth

“The city offers a market for the special talents of individual men.... Because of the opportunity it offers, particularly to the exceptional and abnormal types of man, a great city tends to spread out and lay bare to the public view in a massive manner all the characters and traits which are ordinarily obscured and suppressed in smaller communities. The city, in short, shows the good and evil in human nature in excess. It is this fact, perhaps, more than any other which justifies the view that would make of the city a laboratory or clinic in which human nature and social processes may be most conveniently and profitably studied.”
— Robert E. Park