Purpose
The International Students and Scholars Office (ISSO) at Boston University has prepared this handout for students who have a Certificate of Eligibility for Exchange Visitor (J-1) Status (SEVIS Form DS-2019) for a program of study at Boston University. It describes the steps you need to take in order to pay the SEVIS fee, apply for an J-1 student visa, if necessary, and to enter the U.S. as a student in J-1 immigration status.

Step 1: Read your enclosed SEVIS Form DS-2019
Your SEVIS Form DS-2019 indicates that we have created a record for you in the Student and Exchange Visitor Information System (SEVIS). Your assigned SEVIS ID number is in the upper right corner of page 1 of your SEVIS Form DS-2019. If you have informed us of any dependent family members (husband or wife and/or children under the age of 21) who will travel with you to the United States, each of them will receive their own dependent SEVIS Form DS-2019 to assist them in applying for their J-2 visa. If any information on your SEVIS Form DS-2019(s) is incorrect, please contact the ISSO immediately (or your “Program Sponsor” if your DS-2019 was issued by an organization other than Boston University). If all of the information is correct, sign your name at the bottom of the form. If you will be bringing dependents with you, sign your name as the principal J-1 on their forms as well.

Note: The spelling of your name and your date of birth must be exactly the same as reflected in your passport. The same is also true for dependent family members. If your name and/or date of birth on your SEVIS Form DS-2019 are not exactly the same as it appears in your passport, please contact the ISSO (or your “Program Sponsor”) if your DS-2019 was issued by an organization other than Boston University and request a corrected Form DS-2019. Please send a photocopy of the passport so that we can make sure that all information is consistent, as using an incorrect DS-2019 can result in delays or denial of your visa interview application.

Step 2: Make sure your passport is valid
In order to avoid possible problems applying for a visa or entering the U.S., it is recommended that your passport be valid for at least six (6) months beyond your expected entry date to the U.S.

Step 3: Pay the SEVIS Fee
The U.S. Department of State (DOS) and the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) require proof of payment of the SEVIS fee before issuing a visa or approving any benefits of status. This fee must be paid by new J-1 students with “Begin New Program” DS-2019s who are beginning an academic program in the U.S. in J-1 status. We recommend that students pay the fee as soon as they receive the Form DS-2019 to allow sufficient time for DHS to update the fee payment in the student’s electronic SEVIS record. Please refer to the Student and Exchange Visitor website for more information: http://www.ice.gov/sevis/i901/index.htm

You must also pay the SEVIS Fee if:
- You have studied in J-1 status in the past, but are entering the U.S. on a new SEVIS record number.
- You have studied in J-1 status in the past, but have since changed to another immigration status, and are now changing back to J-1 status.
- You are a Canadian citizen. While Canadian citizens do not have to apply for a visa, they must still pay the SEVIS fee.

You do not have to pay the SEVIS Fee if:
- You are a J-2 dependent.
- You are a J-1 student who is currently in the U.S. under valid J-1 immigration status.
- You are a J-1 student who is transferring to a new school or changing degree program or level using the same SEVIS record number.

You will be required to show proof of your SEVIS fee payment at both your visa interview and when entering a U.S. port of entry.

The SEVIS fee must be paid to DHS prior to your visa appointment or U.S. entry through the following methods only:
- Over the internet with an electronic application form (Form I-901) and a credit card.
  Unfortunately, due to recent processing difficulties, the Student and Exchange Visitor Program (SEVP) is unable to accept credit card payments made on behalf of students and scholars from Ghana, Nigeria, Cameroon or Kenya. Students and scholars from these countries must pay by cashier’s check, money order or Western Union transfer.
- By mailing a paper application with a check or bank draft drawn in U.S. dollars to a processing center in the U.S.
- By making a payment at a participating Western Union in your area.
Visa Application Tips!

During your visa interview, the consular officer will assess whether you qualify for an J-1 student visa for university study by taking into account your academic preparation, your financial security, your English-language ability, and your exchange objective. The officer will also evaluate whether you pose a national security risk to the United States, whether your intention to study in the U.S. is “temporary”, and confirm that you intend to return home after you complete your studies. The visa interview is often a very brief encounter. It is important to be well prepared and make a strong first impression so that you have a good chance of obtaining your visa.

While the ISSO cannot guarantee a successful visa application, we have prepared a few suggestions to help your visa interview:

- The documentation required for the visa application may differ from consulate to consulate. Make certain to review checklists on the website for the consulate where you will be applying and bring all documentation that might be requested.
- The visa “interview” is usually a very brief exchange (often just a minute or two) at a consular window, sometimes in a crowded hall. Generally, the consular officer will be familiar with the details of your application before you are called and will ask a few questions in order to evaluate your intentions in the U.S. and your eligibility before making a decision.
- Before the interview, practice answering questions in English about your application, your academic objectives in the U.S., and your plans after you return home.
- The consular officer may ask questions about your “Nonimmigrant Intent” – that is, your intention to return home after you complete your studies. It may be sufficient to describe your plans after you return home, whether it is to work, continue your studies, or another reason. However, the officer may ask you to provide further proof of your plans. Please see the section on “Proving Nonimmigrant Intent” for more information.
- The consular officer may also ask for proof of financial ties to your home country. Familiarize yourself with types of financial documents to help you prove this, as well as explaining them in English. If your spouse and children will remain in your country, be prepared to explain how they will support themselves without you sending them money from the U.S.
- Be positive and respond to questions with clear, concise answers during your interview.
- For more information on U.S. Embassies and Consulates, and about the visa application process, please visit the U.S. Department of State website at www.travel.state.gov/.
Proving Nonimmigrant Intent

The consular officer will determine whether you intend to enter the U.S. temporarily for study, or whether they believe you plan to immigrate permanently to the U.S. In order to prove your “nonimmigrant intent” you must show “strong ties to a home abroad which you do not intend to abandon.” Consider the questions below to help assess if you may have difficulty with this point of eligibility:

- Is it difficult to obtain an U.S. visa in your country?
- Are a significant percentage of J-1 visa applications in your country denied by the U.S. Embassy or Consulate?
- Are any members of your immediate family U.S. citizens or permanent residents? Are any members of your immediate family living in the U.S.?
- Are you married, and applying for J-2 visas for your spouse or children?
- Is a friend or relative acting as your financial sponsor for your activities at Boston University?
- Will this be your first trip to the U.S.?
- Have you recently finished one activity in the U.S. and will now begin a new activity?
- Have you ever been denied a U.S. visa?

If you answered “yes” to one or more of the questions above, it may be more likely that you will need to provide additional documentation to support your intent to return home after your activities in the U.S.

Proving Financial Ties

If you own property or have financial investments in your country, documenting these may help prove you have strong financial ties. You may not use any assets that will be needed to pay for your J-1 activities. You will need to prove the availability of that financial support separately in order to meet the minimum requirements for the visa.

Recommended Documents to Submit:
- Official papers proving property ownership
- Copies of investment statements or certificates
- A letter or financial statement from your bank or accountant

Proving Employment Ties

If you will be employed full-time upon your return, this indicates strong employment ties to your country. Your employment ties are viewed as stronger based on the prestige, importance and salary of your job.

Recommended Documents to Submit:
- A letter that guarantees a job upon your return and states how important your U.S. activities will be for the type of work the employer wants.
- A letter from your current employer stating that you will resume your work with them after your time in the U.S.
- A letter from a prospective employer stating that a position will be offered to you upon your return.

Proving Family Ties

If all members of your immediate family live in your country, the U.S. Consular officer may understand that you have strong family ties to that country. If you are the oldest child or only child in your family, the Consular officer may believe that you are more likely to return home because of that fact. If one or both of your parents are not in good health, this is another reason you might be expected to return home.

Recommended Documents to Submit:
- Copies of official documents proving family relationships and their residences
- Letters from physicians explaining important medical conditions of your parents

Your Visa and Immigration History

If you have visited other countries and returned to your country after those visits, you have demonstrated a pattern of behavior which may lead the U.S. Consular officer to believe that you will return home after your time in the U.S. The more trips you have made, the stronger your case.

Recommended Documents to Submit:
- Current and/or previous passport(s) containing entry and exit stamps from your country and other countries
- Other official documents indicating departure and return to your home country

Possible Complications in the Visa Application Process:

For citizens of select countries, or those students entering certain prospective fields of study, the consular officer may decide to process your application through a “security clearance” before granting the visa. Security clearances may take more than a month to process, so it is important to apply for your J-1 visa in case you are put through this process. Once the visa application has been sent for security clearance, the student must simply wait until the consular post approves the visa.
In the unlikely event that your visa application is denied, it is difficult to get the Consulate to change its decision. Therefore, it is important that you arrive at your appointment prepared with complete supporting documentation. If your visa application is denied, the ISSO recommends that you ask the Consulate for a written explanation of the denial reason. Please contact the ISSO immediately so that we may help you strategize how to strengthen your chances and your documentation in a second visa application. For more information on steps to take after a visa denial, please visit the DOS website: http://travel.state.gov/visa/frvi/denials/denials_1361.html

Step 5: Travel to the U.S. and Arrival

Once you have obtained your J-1 visa, you are ready to travel to the U.S. Immigration regulations allow you to enter the U.S. up to, but no earlier than, 30 days prior to the start of your program (indicated in section 3 of your SEVIS Form DS-2019). It is important that you keep your passport, your DS-2019, proof of SEVIS payment, original financial documents, and your BU admission letter in your immediate possession when you travel to the U.S.

When you arrive in the U.S., you will apply for “admission” at the U.S. Port of Entry, and an immigration officer will examine all of your documents. The immigration officer may ask you a few questions. If you are asked about funding, answer the question and offer to show the officer your financial documents. If you are asked about your “intentions,” explain your plan to study and offer to show the officer the documents that demonstrate your intent to study while in the U.S. and any documents you may have that help demonstrate your intent to return home after you finish your studies.

If you have the required documents and have answered all questions, the officer will officially “admit” you to the U.S. and will stamp your passport indicating the date of entry and immigration status you have been granted. When you leave the inspection area, make certain you have the following documents in your possession: (1) passport, (2) the SEVIS Form DS-2019 and (3) all supporting financial documents. Verify that the U.S. Entry Stamp in your passport is clear and indicates J-1 and D/S (Duration of Status).

Please visit the Study in the States website for additional information: http://studyinthestates.dhs.gov/students/get-ready-to-go

Caution: It is important that you do not enter the U.S. on a B-1 or B-2 visitor visa, or in WT or WB status through the “visa waiver” program. It is unlawful for individuals in these classifications to study full-time in the U.S., and it is difficult and sometimes impossible to change your immigration status to J-1 once you are in the country.

The Two-Year Home-Country Physical Presence Requirement

After you finish your J-1 program in the U.S., you may be required to spend two years in your home country, or country of last legal residence, before you will be allowed to return to the U.S. in certain types of immigration classifications. You may be subject to this requirement if:

- Either the U.S. government or your home government directly funds your activities in the U.S.
- Your prospective field of research, teaching or expertise appears on your home country’s “Skills List,” or
- You will receive graduate medical education or training during your J-1 program.

Please visit the U.S. Department of State website for more information regarding the Two-Year Home Country Physical Presence Requirement: http://travel.state.gov/content/visas/english/study-exchange/exchange.html. However, if you have additional questions, please contact our office or your J-1 “Program Sponsor” for more information.

Step 6: Report to the International Students and Scholars Office

You are required to report to the International Students and Scholars Office (ISSO) with your passport and Form DS-2019 upon your initial arrival to the Boston University campus from abroad prior to the semester check-in deadline. Reporting to the ISSO provides us with the opportunity to:

- Welcome you to Boston University and assist you in answering questions you may have;
- Review your immigration documents to confirm eligibility for intended activity at BU;
- Update your university record to reflect your current immigration status;
- Report your arrival in valid status to the U.S. Department of Homeland Security to activate your SEVIS record, as a Boston University sponsored J-1 student.

The staff of the ISSO would be pleased to provide you with information, advice, and assistance on any visa or immigration matter that relates to your activities at Boston University. Please visit the ISSO website at: http://www.bu.edu/isso/. We look forward to welcoming you to campus.
