Research Projects Directed      Project Director. “The Orthodox Spirit and the Ethic of Capitalism”. Funded by a sponsored grant from the Bradley Foundation, the project convenes scholars from Russia, the U.S. and E.U. countries to begin dialogue and analysis of the ways in which Orthodox Christianity may contribute to the consolidation of a socially-sustainable, market-based economy in post-communist Russia and, more broadly, former communist countries in Southeastern and East-Central Europe; drawing on Weberian assumptions, the project will concentrate on identifying the linkages between Orthodox Christianity, economic culture, and social action. The project begins with an inaugural colloquium sponsored by the Institute on Culture, Religion and World Affairs (Boston University), with cooperative support from the Institute for Human Sciences (Vienna, Austria) and the Dawson Institute for Church-State Studies at Baylor University. (3/04-present).

Project Director and Book Editor. “Orthodox Christianity and American Public Life: the Challenges and Opportunities of Religious Pluralism in the 21st Century”. Secured sponsored grant from the Archbishop Iakovos Leadership 100 Endowment Fund. Project brings together eighteen scholars to conduct research for an edited book on intellectual, practical, and historical factors affecting Orthodox Christianity’s place in American public life. Organized at the Institute on Culture, Religion and World Affairs, Boston University. (5/03- present).

Project Co-Director and Book Co-Editor. “Orthodox Christianity and the Construction of Democracy and Civil Society in Russia”. Secured sponsored grants from the Bradley Foundation and Baylor University. Project convenes scholars, public policymakers and ecclesiastical leaders from Russia and the U.S. to conduct research on the social, political, economic, and cultural mechanisms by which Orthodoxy affects the pluralization of civil society and democratization in post-Cold War Russia. An edited volume and policy paper will be produced.

Organized by the Institute on Culture, Religion and World Affairs at Boston University, with cooperation from The Kennan Institute at Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and the Dawson Institute for Church-State Studies at Baylor University. (7/03-present).
