Enough with Catcalling (Brazil, 2018, 73 Min.)

Were the cities made for women? This film makes explicit how the participation of women in urban space is marked by insecurity. It tells the story of Raquel, Rosa and Teresa, who live in three different Brazilian cities and through activism, art and poetry, resist and propose new ways of living in the public space.

Co-sponsored by the BU Initiative on Cities and the BU Women's, Gender, & Sexuality Studies Program
