El cine de aquí y de allá: The Transnational Stardom of José Mojica
A Lecture by Nicolas Poppe

Nicolas Poppe is Assistant Professor of Luso-Hispanic Studies at Middlebury College. He specializes in Latin American cultural studies, and researches primarily within the fields of film and media studies. His work on topics such as early Latin American sound cinema and New Argentine Cinema has been widely published. His book Alton’s Paradox: Foreign Film Workers and the Emergence of Industrial Sound Cinema in Latin America is under contract with SUNY Press.

Co-sponsored by the Department of Romance Studies