AREAS OF EMPLOYMENT

Graduates of the class of 2010 who secured jobs in law and business began their careers in the following areas:

Boston University School of Law is committed to supporting our students during this difficult economic cycle. To that end, the law school has provided some part-time graduate fellowship opportunities that are reported as positions in academia/higher education. Thus, the current percentage of graduates in that category is unusually high. The difficult economy also has affected the availability of public interest and government positions, so the current percentage of graduates in those positions is unusually low.
