Photography Exhibition
2011 PRC Student Exhibition
22 regional photography programs highlight their programs in this annual survey.

Exhibition: April 14 – May 8, 2011
Reception: Thursday, April 14, 7 – 9 p.m.
PRC Gallery, 832 Commonwealth Ave., Boston

BOSTON--The PRC is pleased to announce its next exhibition, featuring work by students attending undergraduate and graduate degree and certificate-granting institutions in New England.

Each year the PRC’s student exhibition showcases the incredible range of creative photographic ideas being pursued in the area. This year, each of the 22 organizations taking part will have their own section of the gallery, a modification from past years that will allow visitors and participating students to compare one program to another.

“If I had been studying photography in Boston,” PRC program manager and curator George Slade says, “I would have wanted an opportunity like this to compare the program I was in with the work being done across the wide spectrum of photographic art making.”

These are the programs taking part in the 2011 PRC Student Exhibition:

Art Institute of Boston at Lesley University
Boston College
Boston University College of Communication
Boston University College of Fine Arts
Boston University Center for Digital Imaging Arts
Emerson College
Emmanuel College
Endicott College
Fitchburg State University
Hallmark Institute of Photography
Harvard University Department of Visual and Environmental Studies
Maine College of Art
Massachusetts College of Art and Design
Massachusetts Institute of Technology Program in Art, Culture and Technology
The New England Institute of Art
New England School of Photography
Newbury College
Northeastern University
Rhode Island School of Design
(more)
School of the Museum of Fine Arts
Simmons College
Wellesley College

All programs represented are Institutional Members of the PRC. For an annual fee these organizations insure access to PRC programs, including free gallery and lecture admission and reduced rates on workshops, for their students and faculty.

Visitors to the exhibition will see the emerging talents of the immediate future, as Boston programs have produced some of the world's great photographers.
