

Bibliography for Cases for Course 113HS-243F1: “Religion, Identity and Conflict”

The following sources (a more extensive list than the one in the syllabus) can be used to prepare for both case presentations in class and papers. However, these are only recommendations. You will be expected to do further research on your own. One good source for further research will be the bibliographies and notes in the sources listed here, as well as searches in library catalogues and online with Google.

In this list, you will find some material on historical background and conflict dynamics. However, the primary criterion for selecting the following sources is materials that reflect the specific role of religion and faith-based actors – the part religion has played in the conflict dynamics and the roles, strategies and reconciliation processes that various religious peacebuilders have used in different contexts.

In order to assist you in researching specific cases, reference is made to particular countries or regions, either in the title of the document or in brackets at the end of the listing.
