Faculty Position in Health Science

The Department of Health Sciences at Boston University’s College of Health and Rehabilitation Sciences: Sargent College invites applications for a full time, non-tenure track faculty position. Primary responsibilities will include teaching and advising in the undergraduate major in Health Science, carrying out scholarship, and service. The Health Science undergraduate curriculum provides students with a strong background in the biological aspects of health, specialized quantitative methods used in research programs related to health care, disability access issues, an overview of health care systems, and a broad perspective on population-level health issues, particularly in the realm of global health. The program interacts extensively with other disciplines at Sargent College to offer an inter-disciplinary framework to its students.

Applicants should have a PhD, ScD or MD, a strong record of scholarly activity and expertise in one of the curricular areas noted above, as well as experience in, and a commitment to, teaching and further developing an undergraduate program in Health Science.

The College of Health and Rehabilitation Sciences: Sargent College offers undergraduate, masters, and doctoral programs in a wide range of health-related fields. The College is among the nation’s leaders in funded research in the field of health and rehabilitation sciences. The environment is highly collaborative with faculty who have intersecting research interests. In addition, the Boston area includes many highly regarded medical and educational institutions and offers numerous opportunities for collaborative and interdisciplinary activities.

Review of applications will commence upon receipt and will continue until the position is filled. Applicants should submit a letter of application, curriculum vitae, statement of teaching experience and research plans and three letters of recommendation to:
