Clinical Assistant Professor Position

Applications are invited for the position of Clinical Assistant Professor in the Department of Speech, Language and Hearing Sciences at Boston University. Responsibilities will include teaching within the undergraduate and MS in Speech-Language Pathology program, clinical supervision, student mentoring and coordination of clinical placements for MS-SLP students. This is a full-time, 9 month non-tenure track position at the Clinical Assistant Professor level with the potential for summer overbase salary.

Applicants must have ASHA certification (CCC-SLP) and be eligible for Massachusetts licensure; an earned doctorate degree is preferred. Proficiency in working with children who have language disorders, especially at the preschool level is required. Expertise in the area of autism spectrum disorders is highly desirable. Experience in clinical supervision with a strong emphasis on evidence-based practice and a minimum of five years of direct clinical practice are required. A strong interest in community outreach is also essential. Start date for the position is the beginning of the 2019/2020 academic year.
