The Department of Sociology proudly presents the 2013 - 14 Sociology Seminar Series featuring

Raka Ray

presenting

The Precarious Middle Class: Gender and Migration in India’s New Economy

Raka Ray is Professor of Sociology and South and Southeast Asia Studies, and the present Chair of the Department of Sociology at the University of California at Berkeley. She received her AB from Bryn Mawr College, and her PhD from the University of Wisconsin, Madison. Professor Ray’s areas of specialization are gender and feminist theory, domination and inequality, the emerging middle classes, and social movements. Publications include Fields of Protest: Women’s Movements in India (University of Minnesota, 1999; and in India, Kali for Women, 2000), Social Movements in India: Poverty, Power, and Politics, co-edited with Mary Katzenstein (Rowman and Littlefeld, 2005), Cultures of Servitude: Modernity, Domesticity and Class in India, co-authored with Seemin Qayum (Stanford University Press, 2009), Elite and Everyman: The Cultural Politics of the Indian Middle Classes, co-edited with Amita Baviskar (Routledge 2011) and Handbook on Gender (Oxford University Press, India, 2012).

Co-sponsored by the Center for the Study of Asia

Friday, February 28th, 2014 - 12pm 96-100 Cummington Mall - Room 241

BU College of Arts & Sciences
For more information contact socdept@bu.edu