Dr. Shedd's research and teaching interests focus on: crime and criminal justice; race and ethnicity; law; inequality; and urban sociology. Shedd's award-winning book, Unequal City: Race, Schools, and Perceptions of Injustice (October 2015, Russell Sage), focuses on Chicago public school students' perceptions of injustice and contact with police within and across various schools and neighborhoods, and is a timely examination of race, place, education, and the expansion of the American carceral state.
