SUPPORT SPH: FOR THE FUTURE OF PUBLIC HEALTH GALA

Boston University School of Public Health translates knowledge into action. With a mission firmly rooted in social justice, SPH aspires to create a healthier world for all populations. To do so, we have committed to three imperatives: generating new cross-disciplinary knowledge (think), educating exceptional professionals from diverse backgrounds (teach), and translating our research into cutting-edge practice (do). Instrumental to our success are the ability to recruit world-class faculty and students, launch broad-based innovative programs responsive to global health needs, and embrace all sectors that have a role in shaping the health of the public. Such far-reaching ambitions can be costly. To address our areas of greatest need and greatest opportunity, we draw on our flexible Future of Public Health Fund.

SPH's Future of Public Health Fund is the foundation on which we can build a strong school to support our mission—it is the scaffolding for our aspirations. From student scholarships to cutting-edge research, from program development to fieldwork sparked by global health needs, the Fund provides support for the School's most pressing, and impactful, pursuits in the 21st century. By making gifts to this fund, donors help SPH continue to have an impact on health worldwide, today and for future generations.

The mission of SPH is to improve the health of local, national, and international populations—particularly the disadvantaged, underserved, and vulnerable—through excellence and innovation in research, education, and service.

SPH is deeply committed to igniting positive change in the world by promoting justice, human rights, and equity within and across our local, national, and global communities. It is our engagement with people, communities, and institutions in the world beyond our academic walls that enables us to succeed in tackling the critical public health issues of our time.
