

sustainability@BU Student Opportunities

Boston University students from all disciplines are encouraged to explore employment opportunities as part of our team to gain real-world sustainability experience and contribute to greening our institution. Visit www.bu.edu/sustainability/internships for details and instructions.

On-Campus Positions

Resident Sustainability Leaders: A 20-hour per week, year-long commitment for rising sophomores, juniors, and seniors eager to promote sustainability in dorms and provide support to residents on sustainability subjects ranging from recycling to energy, water, waste, and more. Applications are due each spring.

Interns: For students who are passionate about sustainability and climate action, seeking to gain experience in areas such as data analysis, research, outreach, event planning, or communications. Applications are accepted on a rolling basis, but positions are typically filled well in advance.

Sustainability Ambassadors: For students interested in working alongside other student leaders throughout Summer and Winter Orientation to engage new Terriers and their families in conversations about sustainable living. Applications due in late January.

Internships with Partners

Eversource Internships: For students with a passion for energy efficiency.

Rocky Mountain Institute Internships: A three-part experience for students looking to hone their communication skills to advance climate action. A summer internship in New York City is bookended by semesters interning with sustainability@BU.

ENGIE Internships: For students passionate about clean energy. Multiple US locations.
