The Activities of International Organizations
Course IR 444 E • Spring 2013

1. Course Overview

International organizations are products of the evolution of international society. Their emergence is a response to the growing complexity of the modern international society, which necessitates cooperation between States to solve common and interdependent problems. According to a 2004 record (Yearbook of International Organizations), there are in the world 246 intergovernmental organizations, 1717 other international bodies, and 5387 intergovernmental bodies of special types. Each of these organizations has its own structure and objectives. Beyond their diversity, however, there are common principles that govern the activities of international organizations.

The International Organizations course analyzes these basic principles and looks at the daily workings of international bodies active in five main areas - the maintenance of international peace and security, the protection of human rights, the fight against impunity, the protection of refugees and internally displaced persons, and the regulation of international economic relations. While examining the functions of the relevant intergovernmental bodies in these activities, the growing role of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and other non-State actors will also be analyzed.

Knowledge of basic principles of public international law is important, but not a pre-requisite, for this course since it expands upon many topics considered in the Introduction to Public International Law course.

2. Methodology

Teaching is through a combination of lectures, students’ presentations, talks by and interactions with specialists during visits to the various international institutions located in Geneva. Classes are scheduled on Tuesdays, with three hours of lecture and in-class discussions in the morning, and two hours study visits to international organizations in the afternoon.

3. Assignments and grading criteria

a) A research paper of 5 pages maximum, excluding the bibliography, on a topic chosen from a list below (one topic per 2 students). A 1-point penalty per extra page will be applied (see Blackboard site for formatting rules). The paper is due on Monday at 8am before its discussion in class the next day. It shall be sent to all students by email* (30% of the final grade).

This shall be an academic paper, based on strong argumentations and relevant references (footnotes and bibliography).

A 10% penalty per 8 hours of late submission of the paper will be applied. The only acceptable excuse is illness duly certified by a medical doctor and BU staff. A non-certified illness will not prevent the penalty.

b) A 30mn class discussion of the paper topic, during which its authors have to answer questions asked by the participants, after a 8mn oral introduction to the topic, i.e. 4mn per student (18%).

c) A 2-hour final exam, scheduled at the 8th week of the course, during which 7 questions on the 7 weekly topics, including their development in the research papers, are to be answered (42%).

d) Active participation in class: 10%. This relates to the students’ active involvement in the discussions of the research papers, by asking questions of clarification, making wise comments or other valuable contributions to the debate, and responding to questions asked by the professor on these papers.

The final grade, from A to F, is the total percentage of the assignments, with the following equivalence:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Grade</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>93 – 100 %</td>

<tr>

<tr>

</tbody>
</table>

Students shall also have a look at the general penalty stated in Section 5 of the present syllabus (infra, p. 3).

* Exceptionally, students making their presentation on the 2nd class could submit their papers the week after. The day before their presentation, they need only send an outline of their papers, along with any relevant primary documents.
