The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) is a federal law enacted in 1974 that guarantees the confidentiality of a student’s records. As a student or casual employee of Boston University, it is important for you to familiarize yourself with some of the basic provisions of FERPA to ensure that you do not violate this federal law.

- You must not, under any circumstances, release to any person(s) information about a student, unless your position specifically requires you to do so. You must refer any requests for information about a student to your supervisor to ensure that you do not violate FERPA.

- You should avoid acquiring student records information that you do not need to do your job, nor should you exchange information about students that you may have learned while performing your job. Even a minor disclosure of information (e.g., telling another student of someone’s class schedule) may be a violation, and would result in penalties including the loss of your job. Keep any information obtained in the workplace at work.

I have read and understand my employee responsibilities as stated under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act Non-Disclosure Agreement.

________________________________________________________
Student/Casual Employee Name (Print)

________________________________________________________
Student/Casual Employee Signature

________________________________________________________
Supervisor

________________________________________________________
B.U.I.D.

________________________________________________________
Date

________________________________________________________
Date