Gain a solid foundation in gastronomy with the Graduate Certificate in Food Studies program at Boston University’s Metropolitan College.

The Food Studies program allows you to examine food through the lenses of anthropology, business, communication, policy, history and culture, literary criticism, and the natural sciences. Whether you have a food-related job, you’re a recent college graduate, or you’re changing careers, this program will deepen your knowledge of the cultural and social aspects of food and wine.

Complete the Graduate Certificate in Food Studies in one year with two courses per semester, or choose from courses offered online or in the blended, eLive format.

The Food Studies certificate is a good choice for those who may not be in a position to commit to a full degree program. You’ll still take the same courses as students enrolled in MET’s Master of Liberal Arts in Gastronomy program. Should you wish to continue your studies after completing the Food Studies certificate program, the 16 credits earned can be applied toward the MLA degree program requirements.

bu.edu/met/food-studies
Graduate Certificate in Food Studies Curriculum
(16 credits total)

Students may choose from a wide range of Gastronomy courses, including:

Food Marketing, MET ML 565
Pots and Pans, MET ML 612
Philosophy of Food, MET ML 614
Culture and Cuisine: France, MET ML 631
History of Wine, MET ML 632
Culture and Cuisine: New England, MET ML 638
Food and Visual Culture, MET ML 671
Urban Agriculture, MET ML 714
Food Policy and Food Systems, MET ML 721

Learn more about Boston University Metropolitan College’s Graduate Certificate in Food Studies program at bu.edu/met/food-studies.

Boston University Metropolitan College

Food Studies Graduate Certificate Program
808 Commonwealth Avenue
Boston, MA 02215

An equal opportunity, affirmative action institution. 9/13