D’ART SHTAJIO: JAPAN’S FIRST BLACK-OWNED ANIME STUDIO

There is no exclusive data for the number of African-Americans who live and work abroad, but from the media attention over the last 5 years, it is alot. To saving money, starting over, or learning something new, countless of African-Americans have crossed the Atlantic – and Pacific – to get to the next level. Arthell Isom, CEO and art director of D’Art Shtajio, Japan’s first black-owned anime studio, is one of those people. His work has been featured in music videos for The Weeknd, Jay-Z, Pharrell and others. Yet, working and building a life in Japan has bought along its own unique lessons. (Read the full interview here.)

THE NIGHT SUN BY ZIN E. ROCKLYN

The slap of a fist against flesh isn’t the stuff of ’80s movies, and the recovery certainly isn’t from any film with a knock-down, drag-out fight. My head struck the window hard enough to dizzy me, the pane left intact. My eyes rolled shut, the muscles of my neck seizing at the point of impact, my head lolling forward. His fingers were deep into my afro, nails scraping at my scalp, when the front of the car collapsed against the great beast.

ST. VALENTINE, ST. ABIGAIL, ST. BRIGID BY C.L. POLK

My heart started to pound, I gasped for breath, and it was as if all sound had ceased, as if I’d sunk to the bottom of a pool. All I could hear was a bell ringing faintly, deep in my ears. As if someone were desperately trying to send me a vital message. All this took only ten or fifteen seconds. It was over before I knew it, and the critical message contained there, like the core of all dreams, disappeared. A dimly lit hallway in a high school, a beautiful girl, the hem of her skirt swirling, “With the Beatles.”

CONVERSATIONS ON CAMPUS

DR. TAKEO RIVERA || ENGLISH, AFRICAN AMERICAN STUDIES

WHAT IS SOMETHING YOUR STUDENTS DON’T KNOW ABOUT YOU?

I used to be a slam poet. I started in high school as a spoken word poet who performed for an Afrocentric music group, and then when I went to college, I had stretches when I performed slam poetry nearly every week for a slew of different activist causes. I actually credit that background as one of the reasons why I got into academia.

IS THERE ANYTHING ON CAMPUS YOU WOULD LIKE TO SUPPORT/PROMOTE?

I’m the faculty advisor for the Asian Student Union, and I have to say that the students running the group are doing a really spectacular job developing anti-racist programming this year, confronting both anti-blackness and anti-Asian COVID xenophobia. They’re a wonderful group of student leaders who are really interested in productive, coalitional work.

DR. MARGARITA SIMON GUILLORY || RELIGION, AFRICAN AMERICAN STUDIES

WHAT IS SOMETHING THAT YOUR STUDENTS DON’T KNOW ABOUT YOU?

Professionally, I am a religious studies scholar whose works focus on Africana religions in the US. However, poetry has always served as an instrumental bedrock in my life. The first book that I purchased as a kid with my own money was a collection of poems. Below is one of the first poems that I wrote, one inspired by one of my favorite poets, Georgia Douglas Johnson. Since it is an early poem, y’all be nice because, in the words of Erykah Badu, “I’m sensitive about my sh*@”. See on page 5.

DR. SAIDA GRUNDY || SOCIOLOGY, AFRICAN AMERICAN STUDIES

WHAT IS SOMETHING YOUR STUDENTS DON’T KNOW ABOUT YOU?

I rocked a fade throughout high school. Like seriously, hair was a taper fade. I look nothing like my 16 yr old self.

WHAT HAVE BEEN SOME OF THE CHALLENGES OF ADJUSTING TO ONLINE LEARNING/SOCIALLY DISTANT CLASSROOMS?

Communication-- I kinda feel like a mom telling my students repeatedly that their socks are in the dryer

WITH EVERYTHING THAT IS GOING ON, FROM POLICE VIOLENCE TO COVID TO THE ELECTION, HAS IT CHANGED THE WAY YOU APPROACH YOUR CLASSES?

Students are eager to get an immediate context for these national issues, so we often discuss current happenings
The Body of Love
by Dr. Margarita Simon Guillory

Hands of love stretches forth, rescuing one from a raging sea. Hands of love caress the broken heart and bring forth unity. Hands of love are strong and will defend at all cost.

The voice of love speaks calmness into the turbulent storms of life. The voice of love speaks words of encouragement to the downtrodden. The voice of love encourages one to climb to the highest heights.

Eyes of love see pain when no one else seems to care. Eyes of love notices the brokenness. Eyes of love watch with intensity, taking note of injustices.

Ears of love hear tears as they gently hit the pillow. Ears of love listen when the world, even one's family, turns a deaf ear. Ears of love are attuned to one's every desire.

Love lives...in spite of it all. Love never fails.

THE BLACK SCHOLAR: THE INIMITABLE VAGINAL CREME DAVIS

Her blond hair perfectly flipped, a smile breaking across her warm and open face, Vaginal Davis takes the mic, satin blue nighty shimmying... Black and brown women, including Alice Bag of Sad Girl and The Bags, play backup to our Blatino (half Black, half Mexican), intersexed, queer drag superstar, churning out a low-fi frenzied garage punk beat. “CHINGA TU, CHINGA TU, CHINGA TU MADRE!” they collectively sing in urgent, joyful unison. Go fuck yourself. Literally, go fuck your mother.

- Kirin Wachter-Grene, The Black Scholar
