

As COVID-19 hits the arts, entertainers fight back

Al Jazeera, 3/31/2020: Concerts are cancelled, film releases delayed and festivals postponed, but people under lockdown are finding new ways to experience the arts.

How LA's Street Artists Are Responding To Coronavirus

LAist, 3/27/2020: "The streets are often empty, coronavirus restrictions keeping many Angelenos from venturing out. But when we do, street artists have been leaving coronavirus-inspired work for us to find."

Creative Europe Programme

The European Commission asks beneficiaries of the Creative Europe Programme to showcase their art work using #CreativeEuropeAtHome.

Art World Rallies to Gather Medical Supplies for COVID-19 Healthcare Workers

Hyperallergic, 3/25/2020: "A new group called Mask Crusaders PPE (Personal Protective Equipment) is urging artists, builders, restaurants, and art institutions to donate gloves, masks, eye protection, and other needed equipment at hand."

How 10 Artists Are Staying Creative through COVID-19

Artsy, 3/23/2020: "We decided to turn to artists to see how they're faring during this crisis. As many of them mentioned, a certain amount of "social distancing" was already a part of their routine, with long days spent in the studio. But how are they coping with the broader effects of COVID-19? And what sort of things are they doing to keep their spirits up in these anxious times?"

Emerging artists pledge to buy each other's work amid the coronavirus economic slowdown

Quartz, 3/20/2020: "A new initiative called the Artist Support Pledge is aimed at alleviating some of the economic strain from the coronavirus cancellations, and foster a sense of solidarity within the art community. Conceived by British painter Matthew Burrows, the scheme works on the principle of generosity.”