

Cooperation and Collaboration in Mission: North American Case Studies

Submission Form for Examples of Missional Collaboration

To celebrate the centennial of the International Missionary Council, the Commission on World Mission and Evangelism of the WCC has launched a mission study. Around the world, academic mission study centers are coordinating the study for their own regions. For North America, we have decided to study examples of missional collaboration across all kinds of boundaries, including theological, organizational, cultural, ethnic, generational, geographical, and other differences that normally divide people. We hope to find many examples of North Americans cooperating and collaborating with each other, in the spirit of unity that Jesus shared with his followers.

The Center for Global Christianity and Mission at the Boston University School of Theology invites you to submit examples of missional collaboration in, among, and by North Americans. We are seeking to gather as many examples of cooperative work as possible. Examples can range in scope across large regional or national organizations, city-based initiatives, or cooperation between congregations at a local level. In order to submit an example of missional cooperation, please fill out the sections below and email the document to cgcm@bu.edu.

Thank you for helping us create a fuller picture of the landscape of cooperation in North American mission today! Your entry will go into a free online data base that will be made available at the CGCM website.

1. Your name and email:
2. Name and brief description of this collaborative effort, including website or relevant links.
3. Where does this missional collaboration take place? (city, province, etc.) When did it begin?
4. Describe how this collaborative effort is an example of mission.
5. Describe how this missional effort is an example of collaboration.
6. Is there a leader of this effort, or someone associated with it, whom we could contact? (optional name and email)
8. Would you be interested in being part of an online discussion to share your efforts with others engaged in similar activities?

9. Are you aware of any scholarship or secondary literature written about this type of missional collaboration? If so, please list it here. (optional)

10. Are there any further comments or details you wish to include?