The Muslim Brotherhood: Evolution of an Islamist Movement

Wednesday, October 16 at 4pm

Dr. Carrie R. Wickham is Associate Professor of Political Science at Emory University, and the author of some of the most important works on Muslim politics and Islamist movements over the past ten years. Wickham's new book, The Muslim Brotherhood: Evolution of an Islamist Movement, was published this year by Princeton University Press to widespread acclaim. She is also the author of one of the most important works on Muslim politics of the early 2000s: Mobilizing Islam: Religion, Activism and Political Change in Egypt (Columbia University Press, 2002).

Dr. Wickham's have appeared in Comparative Politics; PS: Political Science and Politics; Middle East Policy; Middle East Law and Governance Journal; and the Muslim World Journal of Human Rights. In recent years, Dr. Wickham has presented lectures at many universities in the United States and abroad. She has also shared her research findings with the National Intelligence Council; the State Department; the National Security Council; the Supreme NATO Command; the Combating Terrorism Center at West Point; the US Naval Academy; and staff members in Congress. She served as a consultant in the Social and Behavioral Science Partnership Program of the US Department of Homeland Security (2005-2006), and was a core team member of the "Social Dynamics of Activism and Radicalization" Project sponsored by the Science and Technology Expert Partnership (STEP) of the National Intelligence Council (2007). Dr. Wickham received her B.A. from Harvard and her M.A. and Ph.D. from Princeton.
