

Governing the Family through Religion in Post-Kemalist Turkey

A Conversation with Hikmet Kocamaner

Post-Doctoral Fellow and Cultural Anthropologist at Brandeis

Recently, Turkey has experienced an explosion of faith-based initiatives aimed at “strengthening the family.” The Directorate of Religious Affairs, a state institution, has become a conduit for a variety of otherwise secular professional and social services targeting families. This talk explores how the family has recently become a key site for the reconfiguration of state-Islam relations in Turkey.

Monday, April 11th | 4:00 pm
Pardee School of Global Studies
121 Bay State Rd, First Floor
Open to the public

Boston University Pardee School of Global Studies
Institute for the Study of Muslim Societies & Civilizations
Institute on Culture, Religion & World Affairs: CURA