CELEBRATING PRIDE MONTH

In 2019, the Meriam-Webster Dictionary announced “they” as their word of the year. This change reflects a shift in society that recognizes the diversity of gender expression and identity. According to the Pew Research Center, more than 1 in 5 adults in the United States identify as something other than exclusively male or female. This expansive language acknowledges the presence of the LGBTQIA+ community.

We must also recognize that the University’s progress results from the tireless work of community members. Boston University’s largest LGBTQ+ student organization, the Center for Gender, Sexualities, and Activism (CGSA), is currently raising funds and applying for grants for the Gender-Affirming Room for Belonging (GARB) at CGSA. The GARB will be a private safe space for students to use the university’s gender neutral bathrooms. CGSA is also advocating for the creation of safe spaces for students in other areas of the campus. In addition, CGSA is working to increase gender-neutral bathrooms on campus. The CGSA senators will focus on getting more and better gender-neutral bathrooms available for the most diverse group of students. They are also advocating for the creation of more gender-affirming walking groups and other activities on the BU campus. The CGSA is a student organization dedicated to creating a more inclusive BU community.

Recently, Boston University has taken action to make our community more welcoming. Supported by BU Diversity & Inclusion, the Center for LGBTQIA+ Student Life, and other university offices, the Gender-Affirming Room for Belonging (GARB) was opened to provide safe space for students whose gender identity or expression does not align with the sex assigned to them at birth. The GARB is designed to be a place where students can go to increase gender comfort, to express their gender identity, and to receive support from community members. The GARB is a space where students can feel safe and supported while exploring their gender identity and expression. The GARB also provides a safe space for students to access gender-affirming products, such as gender-affirming clothing.

A report from the Human Rights Campaign found that a growing number of U.S. adults say they know someone who is transgender or who goes by a gender-neutral pronoun. This small honor is indicative of a larger trend: our society is becoming more inclusive. Last year, a new study found that a growing number of U.S. adults say they know someone who is transgender or who goes by a gender-neutral pronoun. This small honor is indicative of a larger trend: our society is becoming more inclusive.

We must also recognize that the University’s progress results from the tireless work of community members. Boston University’s largest LGBTQ+ student organization, the Center for Gender, Sexualities, and Activism (CGSA), is currently raising funds and applying for grants for the Gender-Affirming Room for Belonging (GARB) at CGSA. The GARB will be a private safe space for students to use the university’s gender neutral bathrooms. CGSA is also advocating for the creation of more gender-neutral bathrooms on campus. The CGSA senators will focus on getting more and better gender-neutral bathrooms available for the most diverse group of students. They are also advocating for the creation of more gender-affirming walking groups and other activities on the BU campus. The CGSA is a student organization dedicated to creating a more inclusive BU community.

The University gave students the ability to network, share experiences, engage in intellectual interchange, and find community. This is not an insignificant change. In fact, it is a step in the right direction. The University’s commitment to creating a more inclusive community is essential for creating a better future.

As we celebrate Pride Month, let us remember the importance of community and the need for inclusivity. Let us remember that the University’s progress is a result of the tireless work of community members. Let us continue to work towards creating a more inclusive and welcoming community for all.

The Center for Gender, Sexualities, and Activism (CGSA) strives to be a safe space for queer and gender nonconforming people. Our mission is to learn something new about the LGBTQIA+ community over the years. This work is so important given that the LGBTQIA+ community over the years. This work is so important given that the Human Rights Campaign found that 91% of transgender or gender-nonconforming people in the United States say they know someone who is transgender or who goes by a gender-neutral pronoun. This small honor is indicative of a larger trend: our society is becoming more inclusive.

One of the many ways that the University is working to create a more inclusive community is through the implementation of gender-neutral bathrooms. The University’s commitment to creating a more inclusive community is essential for creating a better future. Let us continue to work towards creating a more inclusive and welcoming community for all.

The Gender-Affirming Room for Belonging (GARB) is a safe space for students whose gender identity or expression does not align with the sex assigned to them at birth. The GARB is designed to be a place where students can go to increase gender comfort, to express their gender identity, and to receive support from community members. The GARB also provides a safe space for students to access gender-affirming products, such as gender-affirming clothing.

The Center for Gender, Sexualities, and Activism (CGSA) strives to be a safe space for queer and gender nonconforming people. Our mission is to learn something new about the LGBTQIA+ community over the years. This work is so important given that the Human Rights Campaign found that 91% of transgender or gender-nonconforming people in the United States say they know someone who is transgender or who goes by a gender-neutral pronoun. This small honor is indicative of a larger trend: our society is becoming more inclusive.

One of the many ways that the University is working to create a more inclusive community is through the implementation of gender-neutral bathrooms. The University’s commitment to creating a more inclusive community is essential for creating a better future. Let us continue to work towards creating a more inclusive and welcoming community for all.