The Spring 2017 EDRT Meeting will be held on May 23rd and 24th, 2017 at the Center for Creative Leadership in Greensboro, NC. We will be exploring the topic of "Leading From the Future: Listening, Learning and Inclusion for Leading Positive Change," examining the massive leadership challenges that recent shifts in the national and global landscape have brought. Now more than ever, those of us in leadership development need to be wise and impactful in helping to foster inclusive and adaptive leaders who can listen, exercise patience and understanding and take principled action during these turbulent times to lead successful change initiatives in our organizations.

EDRT is very excited to announce that we will be staying at the sustainable LEED-certified Proximity Hotel in Greensboro, NC, a critical site of the civil rights movement in America in 1960s, and that our sessions will be held in a dynamic learning workshop format at the Center for Creative Leadership's 19 acre wooded Greensboro campus and global headquarters. Our keynote speakers will be futurists Bob Johansen from The Institute for the Future, the acclaimed Palo Alto-based research center with a 50-year track record of forecasting the future, and Mark Johnson of Innosight, the leading strategic innovation and consulting firm he co-founded with HBS professor Clay Christensen. Both speakers will share their new work and emerging insights, leading us on a creative learning journey into the future of leadership and the challenge of resilience, transformation and renewal in light of the disruptive forces that confront us.
