Join us for a lecture by internationally renowned writer Yoko Tawada. Tawada writes in both Japanese and German and has published several books—stories, novels, poems, plays, essays—in both languages.

This event will be moderated by Anna Zielinska-Elliott, Senior Lecturer in Japanese at Boston University and a translator of modern Japanese literature into Polish, and Peter Schwartz, Associate Professor of German & Comparative Literature at Boston University.

Co-sponsored by the Department of Modern Languages and Comparative Literature, the literary journal AGNI, and the Japan Society Boston.
