Just one of the many ways BU helps the district

Healthcare without borders

In the 1980s and '90s, Lowell welcomed a wave of Southeast Asian refugees, particularly from Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam. It wasn't long before the Metta Health Center opened, a compassionate healthcare sanctuary for refugees, asylum seekers, and all who have been forcibly displaced. Given Boston University's medical focus on underserved populations, Metta is the perfect place for members of BU's Immigrant and Refugee Health Preventive Medicine Program to serve. BU faculty and residents provide Lowell families access to quality, culturally attuned healthcare, a win-win in any language.
