

BOSTON GLOBE

The Boston Globe summer intern program began more than 50 years ago as an opportunity for college students interested in journalism to gain practical experience on a major news organization.

In 2026, The Globe is keen to place the BUCH intern in one of the following areas: social media/audience engagement, audio/podcasting, copy editing, feature writing or video. Internships are NOT limited to students with journalism majors.

An aptitude for journalism is the most important qualification for the internship. Applicants should be comfortable driving as our interns cover stories from all over New England.

Summer interns work as full-time employees for 12 weeks, between Memorial Day and Labor Day. There are weekly critique sessions for the reporting interns, and lively weekly discussions with editors and staff members on a range of issues and topics pertaining to journalism.
