David Scott Palmer Student Research Grants on Latin America

The Latin American Studies Program at Boston University is pleased to announce this year's competition for funding to sponsor graduate research on Latin America. Projects on Latinos in the US will also be considered. In particular, this initiative is aimed at students completing Master Theses or PhD Dissertations or other significant research projects for academic credit. The funds can be used for travel or other research expenses or to attend conferences. Travel/Research must be completed within six months of award notification. The competition is open to any Boston University graduate student with relevant research interests.

To apply, please address application materials via email to:

- A project proposal of approximately two pages (one-and-a-half spaced), plus any supporting documentation, in which you set out the nature of the project, the specific research to be funded by the grant, a concrete research plan, and an itemized, documented budget for the research. Having a well thought out, detailed plan of research will improve your chances of success.
- Evidence that you are also seeking other avenues of funding (such as GRAF or outside sources)
- A letter of recommendation

Up to $1,000 per student will be awarded, according to the strength of the proposal, the costs of the project, and your overall qualifications.

A CLAS review committee will notify you of its decision within two weeks of the submission deadline.
