

Jeffrey D. Woolf is an assistant general counsel at the Board of Bar Overseers. Before that, he served for 6-1/2 years as an assistant bar counsel at the Office of the Bar Counsel, where he prosecuted cases of lawyer misconduct. He is also an adjunct professor at New England Law | Boston. Previously, he was a lecturer in law at the Law School, where he taught a weekly seminar for eight semesters on topics in legal ethics for students with externship placements. He has been a member of the Dean's Advisory Board since 2015. He started a scholarship in memory of William Schwartz, the late Dean and professor of law at the Law School. From 1995-2000, he was a special assistant attorney general, where he was one of lead attorneys representing the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in the tobacco Medicaid reimbursement litigation, Commonwealth v. Phillip Morris, which generated over eight billion dollars for the Commonwealth.

Mr. Woolf is also one of the founding members of the Boston chapter of the American Inns of Court, which was started at the Law School by two students. He has remained active in the Boston Inn of Court, and has served as its co-president and program chair. For many years, he has funded two annual scholarships to the Inn, so that students at the Law School can attend for free and meet with judges and other leaders of the Massachusetts bar.

Mr. Woolf is president of the National Council of Lawyer Disciplinary Boards, where he formerly served as the program committee chair. He drafted revisions to multiple rules of the Board of Bar Overseers and of the Supreme Judicial Court. He created PowerPoints to train new hearing committee members and pro bono counsel for respondents. He has served as one of the lecturers for the mandatory "Practicing with Professionalism" CLE course for new lawyers. He co-authored and co-edited the treatise Massachusetts Bar Discipline: History, Practice and Procedure. He was a member of the working group that prepared materials for questions about the Rules of Professional Conduct to be included in the Massachusetts bar exam and co-authored the edits and updates. He has given numerous lectures and webinars, and he has also written many articles and book chapters. Mr. Woolf earned his B.A. at Yale University, where he was on the Dean's List, and an M.A. in English literature at Boston University before attending B.U. School of Law.
