

Peter is a Senior Vice President at Atlantic Global Risk, a transactional risk insurance brokerage. Prior to joining Atlantic, Peter worked at Choate, Hall & Stewart and Locke Lord advising private equity sponsors and strategic buyers in healthcare, technology, life sciences, and financial services investments, and was designated a "Rising Star" in 2019 and 2020 in Super Lawyers-Massachusetts. Peter holds a law degree from Boston University School of Law ('14) and bachelor's degree from Boston College ('06). He is a member of the BU Law Alumni Executive Committee, and received the Black Law Students Association's Young Alumnus Award in 2018. Peter has been on the pro bono panel for the EdLaw Project, providing pro bono counsel for low income families with children on Individualized Education Plans and served as a member of the Host Committee for EdLaw's Spring Event. He was on the Steering Committee for the Boston Bar Association's Service Innovation Project, where he worked to develop initiatives to engage BBA members to use their legal skills to dismantle the "cradle to prison pipeline". In January 2022, Peter was appointed by Boston Mayor Michelle Wu as the inaugural chair of the newly formed Civilian Review Board, which reviews complaints from members of the community against members of the Boston Police Department. Peter is the chairman of the board of directors at Union Capital Boston, a mobile-based community engagement nonprofit, and secretary of the board of directors at Minds Matter Boston, a college access and mentorship program for Boston area high schoolers. Prior to law school, Peter taught middle school in Houston, TX and Boston, MA and is a Teach for America alumnus. He is a first generation American and college student, and lives in West Roxbury, MA with his wife, Marisa, and his three children: Marcelo, Solana and Vida.
