

STUDENT TRAVEL

Launch a journey

Like us, you know the importance of real-world experience. What students get in the classroom and the library is essential, but nothing beats putting that newfound knowledge to work on the ground. That's why the Pardee School puts travel at the center of the educational experience.

Travel helps our scholars, both graduate students and undergraduates, see the world and its challenges up close. Both in the United States and abroad, they travel to conduct field research, to deepen their understanding of their chosen specialty by attending and presenting at conferences, and to gain new insights into global issues and the ways they might help address them—not just at Pardee, but throughout their careers.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

More than 77 percent of Pardee's students study abroad—far above the US average of 1.7 percent, and even higher than the 40 percent rate across BU. So the need for financial support is truly great in any given year.

- Contribute to the William R. Keylor Fund for Student Travel: any amount up to $100,000
- Endow a named travel fund: $100,000
- Endow a named graduate assistantship: $150,000
- Endow named, competitive travel grants: $500,000

Support our students' global education!

“ The travel grant allowed me to capitalize on established relationships, and to explore the beekeeping sector in a different context—to really try to understand the challenges from firsthand accounts. The rich field experiences I had provided many insights, including some I had not considered.”
