Teaching Experience

Graduate Training: American Political Science Association- Middle East and North Africa Workshops

- “Civil Society Reconsidered” workshop: Beirut, May 15-20, 2016, Amman, Sept 15-22, 2016. This two-part workshop was designed to train and mentor graduate students who work on the Middle East. The workshop involved training 20+ PhD students on how to design their research proposals and successfully develop a journal article for submission to peer-reviewed journals. The other members of the faculty team included Denis Sullivan (Northeastern), Fateh Azzam (American University of Beirut) and Sandrine Gamblin (American University of Cairo).

IR 307/PO 368- Introduction to Middle East Politics (undergraduate):

- Fall 2014, Spring 2015, Fall 2015, Fall 2017, Fall 2018, Fall 2021, Fall 2022
- This is a survey course on the contemporary politics of the Middle East, organized around the theme of ‘making’ and ‘unmaking’ states. The first half of the course surveys the rise and decline of empires that shaped modern state-formation in the MENA region and provides competing explanations of authoritarianism in the region. The second half of the course focuses on the ongoing struggles to reshape Middle Eastern states.

IR 510- Comparative Immigration and Racial Politics (graduate/advanced undergraduate)

- Fall 2014, Fall 2015, Fall 2017, Fall 2019, Fall 2020, Fall 2021, Spring 2022, Fall 2022
- This seminar examines immigration policies and domestic racial hierarchies across world regions and regime-types. Students examine the role of immigration and racial hierarchy in processes of economic development, state formation, nationalism, and electoral politics in the three largest migrant-receiving regions: North America, Western Europe, and the Persian Gulf.

IR 504 Arabian Peninsula and Persian Gulf (graduate/advanced undergraduate)

- Spring 2016, Spring 2018, Fall 2019, Spring 2021
- The seminar's readings critically assess dominant political narratives about the Gulf by examining the region's history, demography, economy and security. This is a writing seminar designed to teach students how to conduct independent research.

IR 503- US Foreign Policy in the Middle East (graduate/advanced undergraduate)

- Spring 2015, Spring 2018, Fall 2018, Fall 2020, Spring 2022
- In this seminar students examine the United States' engagement with the MENA region that has increasingly dominated U.S. foreign policy since WWII. The first half of the class examines the extent of the U.S.'s involvement in the Middle East by addressing competing explanations about the determinants of U.S. policies in the region. In the second half of the course, students examine some of the unintended consequences of U.S. intervention in the Middle East.

Independent study (PhD students), Immigration and Citizenship in the Middle East (graduate)

- Spring 2015; PhD Students in Sociology: Trish Ward and Daryl Carr
- This directed study provided a survey course of all the literature on the politics of citizenship and migration in the Middle East.

IR 500- Topics in IR: Forced Migration Virtual Policy Incubator (graduate/undergraduate)

- Spring 2016
- This topics course was piloted as an experimental policy course. Instead of written policy recommendations, I asked the students to design digital tools that could serve refugees or the local municipalities and NGOs who serve them. My all-female team of students designed an aid-locator mapping smartphone application for refugees in Jordan (Urban Refuge). Urban Refuge maps aid locations for displaced persons - places like charities, medical clinics, schools, and community organizations - in an accessible, easy-to-use digital platform. The technology for Urban Refuge was developed in partnership with Microsoft, and we received additional support from Hariri and the Software Application and Innovation Lab at BU (15K) to take over the app from Microsoft. The Urban Refuge team also conducted a successful campaign through BU Crowdfunding to raise the money to finish the database of organizations, conduct outreach, and launch in a test market ($17,810).

KHC HC 302: Kilachand Honor's college: Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Global Challenges: The Global Crisis of Forced Displacement

- Spring 2021, co-taught with Professor Carrie Preston (English/WGS) and Professor Muhammad Zaman (Engineering)
- This course is part of the Kilachand Honor's college two-semester sequence, "Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Global Challenges." The course was divided into larger lectures covering core issues on forced migration (co-taught by faculty) and smaller sections (led by faculty and graduate teaching assistants). I led the section on the European Union. Students worked in interdisciplinary teams and presented an intervention or policy recommendation for a specific refugee population at the end of the course.
