Teaching

Boston University

IR 382 Understanding the Modern Middle East, undergraduate

Semesters taught: Fall 2018, Fall 2019, Fall 2020, Fall 2021, Fall 2024

(On research leave Fall 2022 and junior faculty teaching release, Fall 2023)

This survey course offers an introduction to the Middle East and North Africa (MENA region) and focuses on the region's political development throughout the 20th and 21st centuries and explores themes relating to colonial state formation, statebuilding, and regional wars and conflicts.

IR 312 Comparative Development in the MENA, undergraduate

Semesters taught: Spring 2019, Spring 2020, Spring 2021, Spring 2023, Spring 2024, Spring 2025

(On research leave Spring 2022)

This seminar introduces students to the socio-economic and political development in the Middle East. It focuses on themes relating to territorial consolidation and statebuilding, regime types, oil and rentierism, civil society, authoritarianism, democratization, military spending, gender and women's relations, electoral politics and sectarianism and identity politics. It captures regional variation on these themes through in-depth cross-country studies.

IR 560 Nationalism and Ethnic Conflict in a Global Perspective, graduate

Semesters taught: Fall 2020, Fall 2021, Spring 2023, Summer 2023, Spring 2024, Spring 2025

(On research leave Spring 2022)

This course surveys prominent ethno-nationalism movements across the globe throughout the 20th and 21st centuries to better understand the causes and consequences of identity-based conflicts around world. The seminar introduces students to theoretical and empirical debates and works on nationalism, ethnicity, and inter and intra-state conflicts. The course also unpacks the relationship between ethnic conflict and civil wars, rebel group formation, and state fragmentation, territorial disputes to analyze case studies ranging from Africa, South Asia, Eastern Europe and the Balkans, and the Middle East.

IR 533 Revolutions and Contentious Politics in the Middle East, graduate

Semesters taught: Spring 2019, Spring 2020, Spring 2021, Fall 2024

(On research leave Spring 2022)

The events that culminated in Arab Spring in 2011 produced divergent outcomes from revolutions to counterrevolutions. This seminar examines how and why the uprisings challenged previous notions of authoritarian durability as republics, monarchies, secular, and theocratic countries across the region experienced varying degrees of instability sparked by protest movements calling for socio-economic and political change. It surveys works on social movements, revolutions, democratization, and authoritarian adaptability to explain divergent trajectories across countries that experienced political ruptures in late 2010-2011, including, but not limited to Bahrain, Libya, Syria, Yemen, Egypt, Tunisia, and Morocco.
