RESEARCH INTERESTS

Second language acquisition, psycholinguistics, phonetics

RESEARCH EXPERIENCEDissertation (Advisor: Dr. Annie Tremblay)*2020-2022

Department of Linguistics, University of Kansas

- Tested whether Korean listeners' speech perception and recognition of spoken words containing the English vowel contrast /i/-/ɪ/ can be enhanced by high-variability phonetic training.

Research project on acoustic cue weighting (PI: Dr. Annie Tremblay) 2019-2021

Department of Linguistics, University of Kansas

- Investigated whether acoustic cue weightings are transferred from the native language to the second language in Dutch listeners' perception of English lexical stress.

Minor qualifying paper (Advisor: Dr. Allard Jongman) 2019-2021

Department of Linguistics, University of Kansas

- Examined native English listeners' rapid adaptation and generalization to Korean-accented English words and the influence of their experience of learning Korean as an L2.

Major qualifying paper (Advisor: Dr. Annie Tremblay) 2018-2020

Department of Linguistics, University of Kansas

- Examined the use of acoustic cues to the /i/-/ɪ/ contrast among Korean L2 learners of English in speech perception and spoken word recognition.

Research project on bilingual lexical processing (PI: Dr. Ji Hyon Kim) 2016-2017

Department of English Linguistics, Hankuk University of Foreign Studies

- Tested the predictions of the Revised Hierarchical Model and the Bilingual Interactive Activation Plus model through a translation recognition task.
